PLOT HINTED IN TROLLEY CRASH

Today

See Tucson, and Live.
Get Rich, Get Well.
Live Long.
One Yaqui to Ten Men.
Dry Mexico, Wet U. S. A.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 17.

THIS CITY, by its citizens accurately described as "the gem," is two hours ride south of Phoenix, by the Southern Pacific. Traveling through Salt River Valley on the way you see fields of lettuce as big as a Kansas cornfield. Mexicans work in them, Japanese, marvelous agriculturists, direct them. United States citizens own them.

A friend who has talked to the writer about Tucson for years has not told half the story. Built on the desert, the city is surrounded on all sides by tall and beautiful mountains. It has practically been created in ten years, has the biggest bank in Arizona, and is spreading out toward the mountains and climbing up their sides rapidly.

Buy some of that high land now and later you will feel like the real estate man of Long Beach, Cal., who said to this writer:

"I felt guilty when I sold sand lots to Easterners for $100 each. Now I couldn't buy back some of them for $100,000 each."

If you are avaricious buy Tucson real estate wisely. If your health is unsatisfactory, live in Tucson and it will be better than ever.

If you are well and want to live 100 years more, spend your winters in Tucson.

MR. VAN DE VRIES, president of the Chamber of Commerce and a real estate man, dislikes to sell any real estate, knowing that he ought to keep it all. But if you write he will send information.

As you look through Congress street, Tucson's main thoroughfare, you see at the far end a beautiful purple mountain, under a brilliant blue sky. That's better than seeing one of the large gas tanks that occasionally block your view in New York.

Everything in Tucson is interesting, from the new real estate developments of brilliantly colored houses on one side, to the old Indian village on the other.

The big placid brown goats that lie in the sunshine against the Indian adobe walls are pleasing. You wish that civilized real estate did not drive them out. And the young Indian mother, barely 18, her four little children born close together, busy in her bright red dress, pleases more than the "low sunbacked" ladies at more fashionable resorts.

There is a separate village for Yaqui Indians. No one disturbs them, for the saying "A Yaqui can lick 10 ordinary men," is not fiction.

When somebody is killed in that village, unwritten law allows the Indians to attend to it. They know what is best.

"GAY VALLEY," very narrow, dating from the almost-Spanish days, when men were men and carried at least two guns each, is gloomy now. Its gaiety is gone, and gone are the ladies of different nationalities that once sat in the windows and doorways. Virtue, civilization, and the Kiwanis Club have driven them out.

COMPLETELY GONE is "The Wedge," a row of narrow wooden buildings that once ran down the middle of Congress street, every building a saloon. One quiet night the citizens pulled down every one and they never came back. Arizona was for prohibition when Volstead was a boy and is for prohibition still, publicly.

ON ONE MOUNTAIN side you see a gigantic letter A. That stands for the University of Arizona. Every year freshmen must climb the mountain and carefully whitewash that letter, which is seventy feet high.

The university for which that letter stands, and public education generally, are the glory of Arizona.

The growth of Tucson has been marvelous. Development of the public schools has been even more rapid. The citizens have spent their millions generously. An admirable public school is provided for the Indian children, another, bigger and even more modern, for children of the Mexican quarter, no discrimination being made. Splendid grade schools and high schools are numerous.

THE UNIVERSITY of Arizona is a state institution, free to those that live in Arizona. Students may come from other states, paying a tuition of $150 a year. Everything that a university should have, this university possesses, including a brilliant and industrious president, Dr. Homer Leroy Schautz. And some things no Eastern college can ever have, including a garden of desert plants, gigantic cacti, and others so small you scarcely see them. Arizona will not let you move one from the state. And the university has a pit for rattlesnakes, bred and nourished for their venom, used as an antidote for snakebite and dexterously milked from the poison glands every 10 or 15 days.

IT TAKES an adult snake that length of time to store up new poison. Vindictive human beings and warring nations do it more rapidly.

The girls at this co-educational university get the use of a good saddle horse for $10 per semester. The boys play polo and plan an Eastern trip to challenge Princeton. They

MOTORSHOW OPENS IN GARDEN

Largest Group of Cars Ever Exhibited Here Goes On View in Afternoon

Beauty's contribution to the world of mechanism and speed, housed in Motor Square Garden and called 1931's automobile show, was to open at 1 p. m. today.

The formal opening will be held at 8 p. m. But during the afternoon those eager to see the new models, the new adventures in engineering and decorative art, may view the displays which occupy two floors of the Garden.

OPENING ON RADIO

Over radio station WCAE at 8 p. m., President of Council John Herron will officially open the show. He will be introduced by C. A. Rehtmeyer, president of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association.

An optimistic outlook for 1931 brought to them at a pre-show dinner last night, members of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association were "on their toes" for the opening of the annual exhibit.

Two speakers of national reputation in the automotive industry sounded the keynote of optimism, bringing down the enthusiastic applause of more than 500 dealers at last night's gathering in McCann's East Liberty dining room.

EDITOR SPEAKS

James Dalton, industrial editor of "Motor," New York, and William B. Burruss, of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, Chicago, were the speakers. They stressed the necessity of replacement of automotive equipment in service during the past five years and pointed out that economic reasons alone made buying at this time imperative.

Burruss said:

"Quit worrying. If everyone

Main Break Floods South Side Street

Residents of McKean street, South Side, were without water this morning while repairs were being made to a 12-inch water main which broke and flooded the C. A. Turner warehouse basement. En route from Terminal warehouse to Smithton, Pa., with three tons of produce, a two-ton truck, owned by the J. Kenney Transfer Company, and driven by Horace Murray, 29, of 603 West Jefferson street, North Side, slid into a 20-foot gap caused by the leaking water.

Ewald Office-Buying Case Jury Discharged

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—A Supreme Court jury which heard charges of office-buying against former Magistrate George F. Ewald and his wife reported today it could not agree and was discharged.

A Poor Market For Apologies By Republicans

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

President Hoover took a long step somewhere when he signed the Stobbs bill.

Stobbs neutralizes the Jones five-and-ten law, so called because it didn't work between the hours of five and ten.

Now, we don't know much about history. But we do know that the Republican committee and Al Smith will not be immortalized among the famous sweethearts of the ages.

While the relief bill is kicking around like a mule in a tin stable, Al demands an apology from the Republicans.

A Republican apology isn't much good on this market, Al.

While all this was going on, New York revenue agents chased a night club hostess over the

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

—By JOHN J. PERSHING,—

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER VI.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

As soon as the formalities incident to our arrival in Paris were over—and I made them brief as possible—we got down to work, as it was urgent that we should begin at once to lay the foundation for the development and employment of the American Army.

Its size, its organization, its place on the front and the selection of lines of communication all had to be determined as far as practicable before our troops in any numbers should arrive.

To expedite handling the many questions that must arise, especially in our relations with the French War Office, which controlled practically all industrial facilities and transportation, it was War Minister Paul Painleve's idea that there should be a group of French officers placed at our disposal.

Gen. Pershing.

He thought an agency familiar with the French organization, authorized to communicate directly with the bureaus involved and through which we could make our wants known, would aid us in matters of procurement.

Marshal Joffre was designated as the head of this liaison group. The instructions received by Marshal Joffre from the Minister of War were transmitted to me in a polite note. Naturally, it was pleasing to think of being associated with Marshal Joffre, but I thought the adoption of the plan at this time would only add an extra channel through which requests must pass and that this would complicate rather than simplify matters.

The scheme indicated that a sort of tutelage was contemplated, which also made it objectionable.

In my opinion it would be more expeditious to utilize the French officers on duty at my headquarters and develop a workable system through experience. I explained my views to M. Painleve and readily arranged for the officers of our supply departments to confer directly with the chiefs of the corresponding bureaus of the French organization. But this was only the beginning and we soon found that we had much to learn of the difficulties of dealing with French bureaus, either directly or indirectly.

There was no question but that under the great enthusiasm the afternoon of our arrival there existed serious despondency among all classes. The terrible strain of the previous years of continuous fighting, with heavy losses, was telling against both the French and the British. Temporary successes in different theaters of war had brought small comfort, followed as they had been all too frequently by disastrous reverses.

Time Lost Through Inaction

Hopes of the Allies Dampened Because of America's State of Unpreparedness

With actual conditions in mind, one could fully understand why the Allies had been so insistent that a contingent of American troops be immediately sent to France to bolster their morale. While not yet prepared to do any fighting, we could and did furnish men for service behind the lines. We also provided raw material and certain manufactured supplies as rapidly as possible and financial aid without stint.

The following significant statement made by Mr. Lloyd George at a meeting of the Allies at the Quai d'Orsay May 4, 1917, showed that the Allies expected little real military aid from us and doubted whether the shortage in tonnage would enable us to maintain large American forces:

"It is upon the shoulders of France and Great Britain that the whole burden of the war rests. * * * America is still an unknown. We must not count upon her aid in a military way for a long time to come. Five hundred thousand Americans brought to this side of the water would be useful to us, if the war lasts so long, but we must live while awaiting them, and we do not know whether we will have next year the tonnage necessary to

RESIGNATION DENIED BY MELLON

White House Also Refutes Story That Treasury Head Will Retire on March 4

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Published reports that Andrew W. Mellon has resigned as Secretary of the Treasury, effective March 4, and that he is to be succeeded by Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, were unqualifiedly denied at the White House today.

Mellon has not resigned, it was stated, and if he has any intention of so doing he has not acquainted the White House of it.

A similar denial was made that Charles G. Dawes is shortly to retire as ambassador to Great Britain in order to take over the muddled affairs of the Republican National Committee.

MELLON DENIES REPORT

Secretary Mellon, as soon as he reached his office, said:

"There is no truth to the rumor. The story is without any foundation whatever."

The State Department also issued a denial that Ambassador Dawes was resigning.

The reports originated in a copyright article in the Washington Herald, which said:

"Andrew W. Mellon has submitted his resignation as Secretary of the Treasury, but announcement of its acceptance will not be made until after Congress adjourns March 4.

NAMED ROBINSON

"His successor, it is understood, will be Henry M. Robinson, banker, of Pasadena, Cal., intimate friend of the President.

"This information was obtained by the Washington Herald last night from sources close to the administration.

"At the same time it was learned that Charles G. Dawes soon will relinquish his duties as Ambassador to the court of St. James and come home to accept the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee.

"Dawes will be succeeded in London by Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams.

"The post of secretary to the President, recently vacated by George Akerson, according to latest information, is to be filled by Raymond Benjamin, of Vallejo, Cal., another personal friend of Mr. Hoover's, who has been in Washington for the past few weeks."

Wales Set to Leave Paris to Board Ship

PARIS, Jan. 17.—(INS.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, traveling as the Earl of Chester and Lieut. George Windsor, R. N., respectively, will leave Paris for Santander today to board the Oropesa, which will carry them to South America on their 18,000-mile tour in the interest of British trade. They arrived yesterday in the heir's personal plane.

The princes attended a small private party last night, the last function they will attend as members of the British royal family until they reach Buenos Aires.

PERRY BANDIT LEADER DIES

Benny Lepkovitz, alleged leader of the bandit gang which robbed the Perry State Bank a month ago, died in New York City last night.

Lepkovitz died in a hospital from a bullet wound inflicted December 20 by Detective Michael J. Ward. Detective Ward went to question Lepkovitz in a rooming house concerning the Pittsburgh robbery. The bandit leader is said to have attempted to draw his gun and was shot in the chest by the officer.

Harry Hoover, 19, and Edward Pishney, 19, members of the gang, were given sentences of 30 to 60 years last week after pleading guilty to the robbery. Emile Grayshock, 21, has not been sentenced and detectives are searching for two other members of the gang.

FIND STONES ON HARMONY LINE TRACK

Railway Investigator Blames One of Ex-Employes Laid Off Recently; Quiz Begun

Stones placed on the track were responsible for the derailment of a Butler-bound interurban car of the Pittsburgh, Harmony, Butler and New Castle Railroad near Ingomar last night, company officials announced today.

The wreck endangered the lives of more than 50 men, women and children. The heavy trolley leaped to the adjoining tracks, tearing up rails and snapping four telephone and power poles. Traffic was halted for hours, and Ingomar was plunged into darkness.

Mr. Scott

"ESCAPE MIRACULOUS"

Fred Gregg, an investigator for the company, declared he is conducting a rigid probe into the case. Discovery of the crushed rocks recalls the spiking of two switches at Ellwood City Junction a month ago, when two of the line's cars were derailed.

Passengers on the car said only a miracle saved their lives. Although everyone was badly shaken up and several girls are said to have fainted, there were no injuries.

The car is known as the "school car." It carried many students from Perry High School, North Side, to their homes in the rural district.

BUSES SUBSTITUTE

Frank Bickers, operator of the trolley, said he was running below the average speed at the time of the accident. The front trucks leaped from the rails, but the rear wheels remained on the tracks, he said. The trolley stopped in the middle of a 50-foot

KLINE SELECTS FORNER

Selection of a captain, a lieutenant and five new men for the Detective Bureau, authorized in the 1931 budget, and postponement of the division of the North Side into two police districts featured a two and one-half hour meeting of Mayor Charles H. Kline, Director of Public Safety James M. Clark and Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh in the Mayor's office late yesterday.

City Detective Howard Forner, head of the pawn shop division of the bureau, and indorsed by City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, was named captain at a salary of $3,300 a year, it was said.

Forner, with another member of the bureau, is now on vacation in Miami. The others, although decided upon, will not be confirmed until later, it was said. Forner's new job will be a night shift, which will place an official at the head of the bureau at night for the first time.

The mayor also considered a list of 50 names submitted for new patrolmen, as provided by Council.

On the question of dividing the North Side into two police districts, with an additional inspector, two captains and three lieutenants, the mayor said that it would be the middle of summer before the survey of the proposed districts could be completed.

Japanese Diplomat Heads League Court

THE HAGUE, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Mineichiro Adachi, former Japanese ambassador to France, has been elected president of the Permanent Court of International Justice, replacing Dionisio Anzilotti, Italian, who headed the so-called "World Court." The court is now composed of 15 judges instead of 11. Among new members is Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state of the United States.

Pinchot in Executive Home 2 Days Ahead of Time

By E. P. O'BRIEN,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 17.—Another precedent goes "galley west" today when Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot moves into the executive mansion.

Heretofore it has been the custom of the incoming governor to wait until the Monday before his inauguration (January 19, this term) before taking possession of the mansion.

Gov. John S. Fisher invited Pinchot to make himself at home, and sent the gubernatorial automobile to the Penn Harris Hotel, where Pinchot has been maintaining headquarters, to move him and his secretaries to the manse.

Pinchot said today that no administration bills on either the coal and iron police or public utilities question will be presented at the opening of the session Monday night.

Pinchot said bills on these subjects are ready, but he did not indicate when they may be brought up for action.

Pinchot's son, Gifford Brice Pinchot, is expected to arrive at the mansion this afternoon.

He probably will bring some of the numerous dogs and other domestic livestock that roam about "Grey Towers," the Pinchot home in Milford, the governor-elect said.

Mrs. Pinchot is here and will take her place as first lady-elect of Pennsylvania this morning.

Pinchot indicated he may announce the remaining appointments to his cabinet this afternoon.

The only statement Pinchot made today was:

"I am not going to do any work on Sundays during this administration that I can possibly avoid. During the last administration we worked every Sunday and every other day, too—almost 24 hours a day. However, if the newspapers want me to do it, I will meet them on Sunday afternoons."

HEARING ON DAVIS ELECTION EXPENSES SET FOR JAN. 28

BOTH SIDES AGREE ON DELAY

Davis, Jones Chairman in Dragnet Storm Facing Investigation Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Calling for a thorough investigation of charges that Senator James A. Reed (Rep., Mo.) and Senator Davis (Rep., Pa.) had violated the corrupt practices act in the primary campaign of 1926, Senator Caraway (Dem., Ark.) today introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five senators to conduct the inquiry.

Senator Jones (Rep., Wash.), chairman of the Republican campaign committee, was named by Caraway as chairman of the committee of investigation.

Senator Reed (Rep., Mo.) was defeated for renomination in the primary campaign of 1928 by Senator Hawes (Dem., Mo.). Senator Davis was defeated for renomination in the primary campaign of 1926 by Senator Pinchot (Rep., Pa.).

The resolution provides that the committee shall report to the senate not later than March 4, 1931, and that it shall have the power to employ counsel, clerks, stenographers and other assistants, to administer oaths, to issue subpoenas and to compel the attendance of witnesses.

Senator Caraway, in introducing the resolution, said that he had been informed that Senator Reed had spent $400,000 in the primary campaign of 1926 and that Senator Davis had spent $300,000 in the same campaign.

Senator Reed, in a statement issued from his home in Missouri, said that he welcomed the investigation and that he would be glad to appear before the committee.

Senator Davis, in a statement issued from his home in Pittsburgh, said that he welcomed the investigation and that he would be glad to appear before the committee.

Senator Jones, in a statement issued from his home in Washington, said that he welcomed the investigation and that he would be glad to appear before the committee.

Senator Caraway, in a statement issued from his home in Arkansas, said that he welcomed the investigation and that he would be glad to appear before the committee cut the windows in the motorman's cab shattered and a window in the passenger compartment broken.

Shuttle service was started immediately, and when the power was shut off built service was established. Homes in Inverman and Perrymont were without electricity and the weekly motion picture program in an Inverman theater was postponed.

EX-EMPLOYE BLAMED

Representatives of the company advanced the theory that the vandalism may have been the work of one of numerous employes laid off recently by the road. General Supt. Charles Clark estimated the damage to the car at $1,200. Cost of the bus service and repairs were unestimated.

Frank Scott, of Wexford, a passenger on the car, said:

"The car jolted along for two or three hundred feet, or more. Women and children screamed, and all the men shouted in panic. A number of us were thrown to the floor in a heap, but no one was hurt.

"The motorman stayed in his cab. I don't see how he escaped death. He and the conductor showed fine presence of mind when the car at last came to a stop. They turned their attention to seeing if anyone was hurt and in helping us from the car.

"The greatest danger was when a high-voltage wire hit the side of the car; sparks shot all around us and we all thought the car would catch fire, with us in it."

8 Left in Chicago Mayoralty Contest

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—The bumper crop of candidates for the Republican nomination for mayor stood reduced by two today, but still numbered eight, one of the largest fields ever entered.

Charles V. Barrett, a member of the Board of Review and the first candidate to file his petition, withdrew last night. He then canceled the invitation he sent to all other candidates, except Mayor William Hale Thompson, for a meeting tomorrow to attempt to decide on one man to oppose "Big Bill."

Mexico's Cold Wave Death Toll Now 6

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Three more persons died here during the night from exposure as a consequence of abnormally low temperatures which have prevailed this week. The deaths brought the total from the cold wave to six. Warmer weather was predicted for today.

Seek to Padlock Brownsville Hotel

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 17.—Padlock proceedings against the Storey Hotel, Brownsville, will be started soon by the state police.

The hostelry was visited by a raiding squad again yesterday. Ten men and two women, including Sallie Defazio and Ida Pandon, both of Pittsburgh, were held.

Betrayed by Dog, Prowler Jailed For Life

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(INS.)—Because a dog barked, James Cullen, 34 today was under a life sentence in Ossining.

An Irish terrier owned by Joseph Falcon, aroused complaints of the Falcon home on December 8 when Cullen prowled around the house and Cullen was taken into custody. He was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday as a fourth offender.

FEAR FOR KIN IN QUAKE ZONE

Parents and friends of two Pittsburgh young men touring the earthquake zone in Mexico were anxiously awaiting word from them today.

They are Alfred L. Ward, 24, former Carnegie Tech night student of 1322 Cordova road, and Milton Paul, 26, ex-student, of 616 Maryland avenue. The two left Fairmont in October in automobiles for trip to Arizona, but later decided to tour Mexico.

Mr. Paul

Mrs. Ward received a letter from her son several days ago stating that he and his companion had climbed to the brink of Popocatepetl, 55 miles from Mexico City, reported in eruption Wednesday night as an earthquake claimed several lives and wrought great damage in and near the Mexican capital.

Mr. Ward

After climbing the volcano, Ward wrote, he and Paul had returned to Mexico City.

Pittsburgher Named To Military Academy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Appointment of cadets to West Point Military Academy from one congressional district in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh was announced today by the War Department.

Rodman Drake was appointed from the Fifth District in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh was an-Pittsburgh, from the Thirty-sixth District. John J. Duffy, Jr., Pittsburgh, and Jack W. Richards, McKees Rocks, were named as first and second alternates from the Thirty-sixth District.

Retired Contractor And Official Dies

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Jan. 17.—John C. Cain, 84, retired building contractor, ex-councilman and former Liverpool Township trustee, died here yesterday. He was born in Mechanicsburg, Pa., and came here from Pittsburgh in 1878. He is survived by his widow, three sons and two daughters.

CITY OPENS WAR ON VERMIN

J. Albert O'Dell, expert on vermin, today began his duties as chief exterminator of vermin of all nationalities in Pittsburgh city buildings. He was sworn in as an employ of the city yesterday by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark.

O'Dell, whose experience with vermin extends over a period of 34 years, was to begin operations in the City-County Building. Just what variety of vermin he expects to find there wasn't explained.

After the City-County Building job O'Dell will move his field of operations to police and fire stations, where everything, including the trained mice, will be eliminated.

A raid on police station cells will be undertaken as soon as he gets acquainted with the city affairs in general.

CLARK ABSENCE BALKS PARLEY

Tired of waiting in the reception room of Public Safety Director James M. Clark representatives of the League for Industrial Democracy gave up hope yesterday of meeting the director, and departed. They had planned to confer with Clark on the sale of the magazine, "Unemployed," which it sponsors.

The meeting was scheduled for 3 o'clock. Clark sent word to the delegates he would first have to see the mayor, and would return in 10 minutes. The committee waited until 4:15. It was composed of Maurice Schnicrov, attorney for the league; Dr. William J. Van Essen and Sarah Linbach, members of the local chapter.

Weather Conditions.

High barometer still covers the Southeast with diminished intensity, while another high is moving in over Washington and Oregon. Pressure is relatively low over the southwestern states, with the principal centers over Texas. It is raining as far northeastward as Southern Indiana. The rainfall was light except in Southern Texas, where heavy amounts were reported. The temperature remains unseasonably warm at the northern stations, but there was a chance towards colder over the northern plains and northward over Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The forecast is partly cloudy weather on the map this morning, and no cold weather is indicated for this section for the next several days.

River Conditions.

The upper rivers are frozen. Stage at Pittsburgh is 10.0 feet. Dam No. 1, 9.0; Dam No. 8, 7.6, and Dam No. 13, 5.5. The rivers will change but little.

Daisy DeVoe Begins Story In Defense Against Clara's Charges

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—(Universal.)—Daisy DeVoe took the witness stand in her own defense late yesterday on charges of misappropriating $16,000 of Clara Bow's funds for her own uses.

In a voice carefully modulated to keep out the venom, the blonde former secretary and companion of the film's "It" girl almost wept as she mounted to the witness stand and began to do her best to divert the blame from the theft charges against her to the private affairs of Miss Bow.

Throughout most of the day she had sat listening to the prosecution read into the record scores of checks which she is alleged to have drawn on Clara's special bank account and the proceeds of which she is alleged to have placed in her own private account.

But once she took the stand after the state rested its case Daisy proceeded to do her utmost to make her former employer suffer.

FLINGS BARBS AT CLARA

She flung her barbs with a free and eager hand.

She told of being told she had made complaints to her employer, later had to make out checks to Clara's husband, Rex Bell, for $5,000.

Also she told of wide friendship of Clara and of gifts the flame-haired star purchased for her friends.

A drill recitation of her history prior to her employment by Miss Bow as secretary and companion preceded her references to her former employer's personal life.

Daisy explained that she had been employed by Clara to pay virtually every bill of any kind contracted by the star. Among the bills she listed checks for liquor, for salaries, groceries, the automobile and finally the alleged losses of the actress at poker.

Miss DeVoe, questioned by her attorney, Nathan Freedman, declared she had purchased liquor quite often for Miss Bow.

She remembered one liquor bill for $375 that she paid at the Bow home, she said. That may have been the largest. She wasn't quite sure.

Then she switched to poker. It was a matter that Miss Bow relished, Miss DeVoe declared. She indulged in poker "six times a week," many weeks when she was home.

In fact, Daisy meticulously added, Clara would often break dinner and theater engagements in order to remain home and play poker.

CITES POKER LOSSES

Miss Bow's losses at the gaming table varied. But Daisy said they ran between $4 or $5 and $300. She paid them all. She said.

"She never paid. I paid them all. Miss Bow never had any money. She did not carry it. She always looked to me to pay the bills."

That same procedure, Daisy continued under questioning, ruled when they were out of the city.

She said she paid Clara's debts in New York, in Texas and at Culver.

As a matter of fact, Daisy brought out, Clara wasn't interested in finances or money in the slightest, apparently. Repeatedly

PAROLED KILLER GETS NEW TERM

Convicted of beating a friend using brass knucklers and of robbing him of $16 while on parole for second degree murder, Andy Burzdun, 36, of Universal, today began serving a new sentence of from one to 10 years in the penitentiary.

Burzdun pleaded guilty to second degree murder in the death of Joseph Strauf in Universal, shot during a fight, according to Burzdun's statement at his arraignment July 8, 1918.

Sentenced to from 10 to 15 years in the penitentiary, he was released on a five-year parole after serving 10 years. In yesterday's case, Burzdun pleaded not guilty to charges preferred by a friend, Wassel Burdick 34, of Universal, who said he beat him and robbed him of $16. Burzdun denied the robbery charge and said he struck Burdick in a fist fight.

LAW SCHEDULE DUE TODAY

Listing of the legislative projects planned by the city for passage at Harrisburg during the present session of the House and Senate was expected today. It was learned at the office of City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

Ill for the past few days, Waldschmidt was forced to postpone compiling the list until his return to his office today.

Among the legislation sought, it was said, will be securing of added amounts of state aid from automobile licenses for paving and street construction projects in Pittsburgh. Public works projects will be asked also.

PRESBYTERIANS UPHOLD POPE ON MARRIAGE

Commission Members Laud Vatican Stand; Findings To be Given Session Here

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Praise for the recent expression of Pope Pius XI was voiced by members of the commission on marriage, divorce and remarriage of the Presbyterian Church. The commission is to report its findings to the Presbyterian general assembly at Pittsburgh in May.

The members also heard the liberal views of present-day college women as related by Mrs. Charles K. Roys, dean of Wells College at Aurora, N. Y.

TWO UPHOLD POPE

Dr. Ralph M. Davis, chairman of the commission and pastor of the Church of the Convenant, Erie, Pa., was first to laud the Pope's encyclical. He termed it a step in "the conservative swing back to stable foundations."

Prof. George L. Robinson of Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, said:

"Pope Pius XI, in his recent encyclical, has in a measure paved the way for a clearer understanding of the whole question of marriage and divorce."

COLLEGE GIRLS' VIEWS

Mrs. Roys said a questionnaire at Wells College had shown her that all the consulted group would marry expecting to have children, but that all approved of limiting and spacing children according to health, income and other conditions. The girls deemed physical examinations necessary before marriage; were willing to supplement family income by holding a job; favored uniform divorce laws, and considered that children would act as a deterrent to a couple contemplating separation.

Mrs. Roys quoted the girls as asserting:

"Divorce should be obtainable by mutual agreement without pressing vicious charges."

Dr. Davis had declared earlier in the session that those who do not recognize what he called "the sacramental essentials" of marriage, should not ask the church to unite their lives.

Salvationists Plan Young People's Week

Young People's Week will be ushered in at tomorrow's meetings in the Salvation Army Headquarters, 425 Second avenue. Staff Capt. RENEWED AUTOMOBILE ACTIVITY CAN BRING RETURNED PROSPERITY

John Jones is a steel worker in Pittsburgh. Bill Smith is employed in a gasoline refinery at Bayonne, New Jersey. Harry Black makes his living in a tire factory at Akron. Walter Wood mines lead in the Joplin district. Charles Brent, in a factory near Milwaukee, cuts leather that came from a cow raised in Wyoming. His brother Ed is a timber cutter in Washington. Sam Wray works in a copper mine in Arizona.

All of these men have dependents. Some of them have families of their own. They have clothed them, housed them, fed them, and given them such cultural advantages as they have been able to provide upon the wages or salaries or earnings of their jobs.

Right now they're not doing so well as they were in 1928 and early in 1929. Mines, mills and shops are not so active now as then, and they're up against hard times. Because these workers are not so plentifully supplied with wages, the butchers, the dry goods stores, the shoemakers, the clothing merchants . . . in fact, everyone in the towns where they live have likewise had a constriction in income.

When are times going to pick up for these merchants?

When Jones, and Smith, and Black, and Wray, etc., get back to work again. When are they going to get back to work again?

Well, let's see where some of the products went that they were working on, and then we will know by a resumption of the sale of those products that the round of prosperity will start again.

Eighteen per cent of the finished rolled steel that is made was used by the automobile business. John Jones profited from that. Sixty per cent of the stripped steel, 39 per cent of the sheet steel, 29 per cent of the steel bars, and 52 per cent of the malleable iron made is consumed by the automobile industry.

Motor cars use 80 per cent of the gasoline that the oil industry makes. Eighty-four per cent of the rubber produced in the country is used in automobiles, and 73 per cent of the polished plate glass. Automobile manufacturers are the largest single purchasers of the nickel used in industry, taking 26 per cent of that commodity. They buy 31 per cent of the lead mined, 58 per cent of the upholstery leather, and 17 per cent of the hardwood lumber production of the country. They use 37 per cent of the country's aluminum, 15 per cent of its copper, 23 per cent of its tin, and 10 per cent of the cotton grown in the United States.

More than 10 per cent of all the working people in the United States are employed by the automotive industry. Every state produces some of the raw materials used, and 33 of the 48 States produce completed parts or accessories that go into the completed automobile.

Industrial leaders and bankers generally agree that the biggest single stimulant to American business is supplied by the automobile industry because its volume is so large and covers so widespread an assortment of commodities.

Replacements, buying of needed automobiles, would quickly place John Jones, Bill Smith and Harry Black and all their associates back on a payroll again, and put money into the till of the butcher, the baker and dry goods store, the shoe shop and allied lines who may have forgotten just where a large part of their prosperity between 1920 and 1930 had its starting point.

Come to think of it the time should be ripe for a book, "Experiences of a Bartender" (sub-title "One Up, Two Down"). The bartender we have in mind would have to have served the tastes of persons whose names would lend interest to the volume. Undoubtedly the customers would be interested in knowing just how many tall ones this notable blue was able to consume, or how many short ones that beauty of the stage could handle, how such and such a person behaved under pressure.

If his activities had not been confined to the local boundaries Al Keller could write such a book. He stood for years behind the bar at Moerlein's, the famous hostelry at Fifth avenue and Bequet street, which was conducted by Matt Trabert—thus, of course before prohibition.

Possibly in truth Keller could describe himself as the bartender who drew more beer in one day than any other bartender in a big country. His record was seven barrels, tapped and emptied by himself on a hot Memorial Day, all in schooners. For his record Keller owes much to the Pirates, for the morning and afternoon games attracted to Forbes Field crowds which found Moerlein's a welcome relief from the sun. They were packed six and seven deep in Trabert's that day.

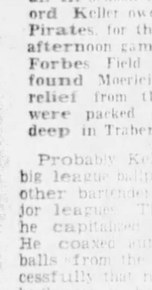
Probably Keller knew more big league ballplayers than any other bartender in the two major leagues. These friendships he capitalized to the extent. He coaxed autographed baseballs from the players so successfully that he gave over the bookcase in his home to the spheres. This had its drawbacks. The boys of the neighborhood begged and begged for them, and finally Keller gave it up.

One ballplayer of whose drinking habits Keller need make no secret was Babe Adams. The Babe would retire to Moerlein's after the game, drink one beer, drink a second, order a cigar and go home. Always he refused hard liquor and never did he venture beyond the suds of a second schooner.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.
To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Had a long talk with the President. He sincerely feels almost with emotion that it would set a bad precedent for the government to appropriate money for the Red Cross. He feels that once the government relieves the people, they will always expect it, and you have broken down the real spirit of American generosity and spoiled all that our great American Red Cross has worked years to achieve.



Will Rogers

Talked to Barton Payne and all the head directors of the organization who were in conference at that time, and they felt the same way. Now in the Senate they will pass Senator Robinson's 25 million humanitarian appropriation bill. In the House there will be a fight over it. Now if we really want to see somebody helped we better go ahead and raise our various quotas on what they asked for. Even if this other passes it will be too late to save the fellow who is hungry now, no matter what the politicians do. Whether it's called a "dole" or a "gift" you can't live on these speeches they're going to make about it. Charity is an organic exercise.

But a digestive failure, personally I think we can use both funds we ten and the twenty-five and give our needy the gout.

Yours, WILL.

FINE ANGLO-AMERICAN COMEDY ON VIEW IN ALDINE

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

A good American English comedy that's. Youth Comes Along is the Aldine screen now.

It's no more English than Bugs Baer is a writer of Shakespearian dramas. And it has little more plot than a session of Congress. It's a situation comedy with as many cracks at a mule-teer's whip. It has love interest by virtue of graceful, beautiful Frances Dee the heroine. It has comic interest supplied principally by near-sighted, drawling, countrified Stuart Erwin and Mathilda Comont. Patrician appeal is supplied by lush English country estates in the California manner.

ROGERS IS HERO

Charles erstwhile Buddy Rogers is the hero. He's more satisfactory than in some other pictures you've seen. He's best in his comic bits, poorest in his efforts at love. And a swell of a foil for Erwin. With Willard Austen doing a first-rate P. G. Wodehouse English gentleman, dumb, dapper, debonair.

Rogers has lost his millions and his Gangster A-1 race horse. He's employed by a London tailor to wear the tailor's clothes on the street, followed by Erwin in a sandwich board. They hang around a famous restaurant where in his palmier days Rogers, an American, had been a favorite.

ALONG COMES BEAUTY

When a beautiful girl comes to the building in evening clothes I think he's the man she was intended to meet. A prospective rich suitor. Erwin disapproves and the pair fall in love. And they step on Rogers' employers. Rolls-Royce, when the young lady indignantly leaves her betrothed in the restaurant, and are whisked to her city home.

Fired for the escapade, Rogers and Erwin obtain employment as cooks with a South American coffee grower, find themselves on the estate next to the girl's. The planter is away on the Continent, the planter's fat wife gives the boys free reign.

It's just as good comedy as it is a poor imitation of England.

AWARD MOTHER 2 CHILDREN

Mrs. Anna M. Mason, 4723 Baum boulevard, a nurse, has been awarded custody of her two children, Geraldine, 12, and William, 5, by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court, following a habeas corpus hearing against her former husband, William Mason. The latter is to be permitted to have the children two days a week.

The couple were divorced in 1929. Until last November he and the children lived at Mrs. Mason's mother's home in Park street, McKeesport. He left, taking the children, which Mrs. Mason declared were not now receiving proper care.

REOPENING OF DAVIS BRINGS LITA CHAPLIN

The Davis Theater will reopen today. The stage will have Lita Grey Chaplin, former wife of the famous screen star, in person and afterwards. The screen will feature Lew Ayres in his latest production, East Is West.

Lee Tracy, star of "The Front Page," is co-starred with Bette Compson in "She Got What She Wanted," comedy opening at the Harris today. The stage will have a new vaudeville bill.

Mendel Inc.'s comedy comes to the Alvin Monday with the original New York cast headed by Joe Smith, Charles Dale and Alexander Carr. The play had 343 performances on Broadway. Matinees will be Wednesday and Saturday.

"America's Sweetheart" opens at Monday at the Nixon has a cast including Jack Whiting, Gus Shy, Jeanne Aubert, John Sheehan, Harriette Lake, Inez Courtney and the Three Foreman Sisters. This will be the first performance on any stage.

The Ninth Guest, which opens Monday at the Pitt, represents another venture of the George Sharp Players into the realm of mystery melodrama. There will be the usual Thursday and Saturday matinees.

Train Victim's Wife Gets $16,982 Award

A verdict for $16,982 has been awarded Mrs. Sophie West Elizabeth in suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for $20,000 damages on account of the death of her husband who was killed by a train at the Borgo street crossing April 18, 1928. She has four small children. At the trial it was contended the flagman was out of repair and that Sophie, who was in a small automobile, did not see the approaching train. The case was tried before Judge Harry H. Rhodes.

JANET GAYNOR SAVES CHARLES FARRELL FROM DRINK

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Volstead made a big mistake when he tried to save the U. S. from the Demon Rum by filling the penitentiaries with the thirsty and those who irrigate them. He should have gone to Hollywood and secured a lot of Janet Gaynors to tackle the problem. Janet showed yesterday at the Penn Theater how to rescue the wild ineBriate who can't resist the inviting lilt of the Stein Song.

George Seibel

It happens in The Man Who Came Back," a film version of the old play by Jules Eckert Goodman. Charles Farrell is the wild one with whom he saved, and there's the rub, for the Janet Gaynors might not consider the ordinary variety of rum-hounds worth saving.

RICH FATHER NEEDED

Another requirement is a rich father—one of those melodramatic fathers with untold millions and an only son. They talk like police sergeants and think millions can do anything.

When the irate father allotted to Charles Farrell sends him to Frisco, and later has him shanghaied and taken to Shanghai, Charles just naturally drinks more 'n ever. And Janet follows him around taking dope to keep him company. Sh 'tis only licorice. A nice girl like Janet wouldn't take real dope.

She saves him for a year in Honolulu, and then his aunt appears on the scene, making more trouble.

BUT ALL ENDS WELL

Drink and Dope, Aunts and Fathers cannot win against Janet Gaynor—as we learn in the final clinches. If you ever read the "Family Herald" or the "Fireside Companion," you will adore this picture of how she saved Charles Farrell from the Demon Rum.

After that everybody enjoyed the stage show, in which Ted Claire blacks his face, and some graceful Spanish dances are presented by Dorothy Berke and Leon Barte. Rough-and-tumble comedy by Barto and Mann, humorous organ bits by Dick Leibert, "New Moon" airs by Pesetski's orchestra, and a dashing dance by the willowy Martha Bonimi of the Juvenile Follies completed the jollification over the comeback of Charles Farrell all the way from Shanghai.

Police Called in Row Over Switch Repair

It required a detail of police from the North Side yesterday afternoon to settle an argument between employes of the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Bureau of Water.

Railway employes were repairing a switch at Sandusky and East Ohio streets. They insisted on cementing the new switch in a way that would interfere with the water-rate box on a 16-inch main under the street, according to Robert Black, superintendent of the North Side Water Bureau. One word led to another and a call was made for the police. After a controversy lasting 20 minutes railway employes agreed not to cement up the box.

Settlement Group To Present Play

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players will present A. A. Milne's three-act mystery play, "The Perfect Alibi," in the Settlement Auditorium Tuesday, January 20. The play which never has been given previously in Pittsburgh, is under the direction of Louis Isaacs, formerly a Hollywood movie director. He is assisted by Alex Schulman. Players include Elihu Glass, Bill Sloane, Samuel Dee, Moll Harry, Ziff, Eleanor H. Frank, Esther Gratman, David Silverman, John L. Taylor, Hymen Bennett, Walter Framer.

Retiring Fireman Honored, Given Ring

C. G. Irwin, who retired as a fireman after 22 years' service, was presented a Masonic ring by his comrades in Engine Company No. 26 at a sauerkraut supper. The presentation was made by Capt. William Schweppe.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright 1930, by Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Now There!

Far be it from us to belittle our stage partner, Harry Richman, but a column must have paragraphs.

During our vaudeville show this week, in which most of the black-out sketches end with pistol shots, Mr. Richman (Reichman to you!) was singing "Puttin' on the Ritz." As he hit the final high note, an entertainer three dressing rooms flights upstairs shrieked:

"Oh, my, I've missed my cue!"

How Embarrassing!

Hope Hampton's favorite table concerns the touring stock troupe's misleading man who was giving one of the many plays in his repertwar.

During one performance he forgot his lines and edged over to the wings and whispered to the prompter:

"What's the line?"

"What's the play?" was the devastating reply.

Nifty

To hear Sid Silverman argue it, the only thing that travels faster than light on Broadway is a sour notice.

And They Are!

A group of Broadway lads were discussing Earl Carroll, who, when he needed his influential friends a year ago, found out that they suddenly went deaf.

"Carroll," observed one local philosopher, "is the sort of fellow who believed that his friends were as white as the Broadway light—which happen to be yellow."

Bravo

The New York dailies have been cheering and confoting the musical comedy "Ballyhoo," which Arthur Hammerstein turned over to the cast because of insufficient public response. Prominent newspaper men learning that the troupe had consented to keep the show alive on the "commonwealth plan" contributed graceful comments about the production. Stage hands and musicians and others gave assistance to all concerned so that the unemployment situation-ay-shun would not get worse in New York.

What thrilled this department was knowing that the popular Gus Van (Van and Schenk) is now appearing in "Ballyhoo," and his specialties along with W. C. Fields and the others are responsible for the grand business at the Hammerstein playhouse.

The thrill being that Mr. Van is appearing in "Ballyhoo" and refuses to take any wages.

Tact

A soft answer turneth away wrath, as the wise crack goes, and the other day that proverb was exemplified in a Park Row newspaper office. An actress known for her spotless reputation on and off the stage was the victim of a columnist who didn't mention her name, but you would never have known that he meant her unless you read it.

She went right to the editor about it.

"I should like to teach him a lesson and sue him!" she almost wept.

"Madam," diplomatically replied the editor, "don't waste your valuable time. You cannot sue a man for having bad taste!"

For Some People

Take it from Arthur Brown, Broadway is a heartless street.

Observation

You might have observed a story in the newspapers recently that the news services featured from England, which concerned a man who had posed for a talking movie in which he read his will. After his demise, the cable dispatches stated his kin gathered in a movie studio and witnessed the flicker. It appears that the man bequeathed this and that to those he liked and to those relatives he had cut off with nothing he gave them a piece of his mind. This was considered unusual news.

As a matter of fact, the same theme served as one of the funniest revue sketches New York ever enjoyed in Earl Carroll's "Vanities." And long before that an identical flicker was shown at the Embassy in New York featuring Judge Ben Lindsey.

Wilde Waves

"Generations are needed to make a gentleman; mere circumstance a lady. . . . When a woman has an affair of the heart she goes into ecstasies; a man into details. . . . Love is more tiring than friendship, for it demands continuous proof. . . . A man in love will take his chances; a woman, in her anxiety, throws away hers. . . . Surely God must have been disappointed in Adam; he made Eve so different. . . . Woman never ceases loving a man until she finds another to replace him."

Overheard

They would have you believe that a stranger to Broadway halted a traffic cop and asked the direction to a certain theater.

"Walk three blocks south," replied the cop (who apparently had seen the show), "until you smell ham, and then turn to your left."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Anne Douglas Stewart Becomes Bride of John E. McKelvy

Two of the popular members of the younger set are being married this afternoon. And the bride, of course, is Anne Douglas Stewart, daughter of Mrs. Douglas Stewart, of Solway street, and the bridegroom is John B. McKelvy, son of Mrs. William McKelvy.

The ceremony is being performed by the Rev. Dr. E. J. Vatter in the drawing room of the Stewart home before a mantel piece banked with chinese lilies and adiantum and decorated with afterglow roses and late spring flowers.

Bridal Costume

The bride is wearing a Grecian gown of white satin having a tiara of pearls at the waistline and pearls at the neck and waist as the only trimming, and a court train over which cascades her veil of old lace, an heirloom. She is carrying gardenias and white orchids. Her only attendant, her sister, Mrs. George A. Kelly III is appearing in apple green satin and tulle and is wearing a quaint green poke hat and carrying talisman roses. Mr. Kelly is best man.

The mother of the bride is wearing violet lace and the mother of the bridegroom black chiffon and lace, both have corsages of orchids.

A reception is to follow the ceremony with the wedding dinner to be served in the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. R. V. Messler. After a Honolulu honeymoon the McKelvys will be at home in Pittsburgh.

Last night the Kellys gave the rehearsal dinner in the Pittsburgh Golf Club with covers laid for 50. Yellow pernet and afterglo roses and euphorbia decorated the tables, and yellow and green tapers in green crystal holders lighted the scene.

This year the Junior League is again planning a play, which will be given February 19, 20 and 21 in the Nixon Theater. Last year the members gave "The Wizard of Oz," you'll recall, but this year the play is being given by league members in 15 cities, thus organizing a national traveling play, and it is Maeterlinck's charming phantasy, "The Blue Bird."

League Plans

The cast is under the direction of Gloria Chandler, who is coaching the play in Hartford, Conn., and has directed the Chicago League production. There will be a try-out in the Pittsburgh Golf Club on January 27.

Mrs. Joseph M. Scribner is general chairman of the Pittsburgh production, assisted by Phyllis Totten. Chairmen of the committees include Louise Totten, treasurer; Christine McKelvy, program; Mary Carroll, advertising; Mrs. Joseph I. Marsh, tickets; Mrs. Felix B. Snowden, charities; Mrs. A. Verner Wasson, patronesses; Mrs. R. Kent Hanson, costumes; Florence Carroll, schools; Catherine Suydam, dancing, and Nancy Hamilton, makeup.

February 21 free tickets will be given various children's charitable institutions and free transportation provided for them. Last year more than 1,300 children were transported.

The marriage of Mrs. Lillie Reed McMaster, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John C. Reed, of Brighton road, to William Noble Zortman, son of Mrs. George Zortman, of Avalon, took place in the bride's home this morning. Officiating was the Rev. Dr. Charles Wright Fulton, of the Eleventh United Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Zortman left for the East and will go to Miami, Fla., later.

Mrs. Anna M. Wilbner, of Whitepiece, banked with chinese lilies, pale green Swiss alp arrangements and adiantum and decorated with afterglow roses and late spring flowers, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Grace Alice Wilbner, to Joseph Charles Miller, which took place on Thursday in the Holy Trinity Church.

Wedding Yesterday

The bride's sister, Miss Hilda Agnes Wilbner, was her only attendant and Edward Lecthe Wibner served as best man. After the wedding breakfast in the Hotel Schenley, Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for a two-month honeymoon in the West Indies and Florida. They will make their home in Vernon drive, Mt. Lebanon, upon their return.

CLUB NOTES

The literature department of the Congress of Clubs at its luncheon yesterday presented a program of unusual merit. Mrs. May T. Neff, chairman, introduced Mary J. Cowley, who in turn presented Olive Roberts Barton, columnist and author. Mrs. Barton prophesied that the school of the future will be fitted to the child, that there will be no grouping by years but only on mental age. To properly understand a child, the principal, teachers and parents should form a group to investigate the child's mental capacity. Mrs. Katherine W. Riggs, a member of the department, introduced Miss Grace Ellis, who furnished the music. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky spoke on "Pittsburgh Writers," of whom she named a large number. Mrs. W. A. Lanning gave a book review, and Miss Kate Lutton read some original poetry.

roof tops. She was wearing flaming red pajamas. There's racing in Havana also.

Stobbs doesn't wear flaming red pajamas. But he knows the difference between a pint and a gallon.

He doesn't intend to punish the man who habits it by the pint. He is after the confirmed philanthropist who merchandizes it by the gallon.

Anyway, it is impossible to wreak further havoc and desolation on a pal who has just absorbed a pint of the volcanic syrup they drink nowadays.

Your justice and your vengeance arrive too late. Your subject is impervious to further improvements. It would be just like sticking pins in a mummy.

We are looking at a front-page picture of five smart crumb jugglers who put the finger on several hundred creep joints before they stepped on their chins.

They were going like a snowball in the Alps before the law laid a big egg in their laps.

Five smart wolves in snappy clothing. And standing on each side of them is one of the muggs who captured them.

It looks like a big year for the muggs.

Once again we warn the wise crackeroos against the muggs. And we don't know much about football, but we do know that nobody ever gained much ground through the police department.

The oldest hunk of grammar in existence is that you can't fight City Hall.

Twenty years ago, Wilson Mizner lapeled us in a billiard room and said, "My boy, the law is a terrible thing on land or sea."

That was good enough for us. Wilson was old enough to know how many letters there were in the alphabet. A mugg learns quick.

But a smart guy never learns that coffee in the cup is coffee while coffee in the saucer is international.

The muggs who captured the five cake-grinders were ordinary weed benders. They had chins in triplex and baggy knees in multiple.

They were the kind of bohunkisters you shove aside to grab a girl for the next dance.

But just as you are perched as pretty as currants in a pudding along comes a mugg and gives you the choice of the collar or the sapp.

The collar being a nice quiet pinch so much favored on Park avenue and Newport. While the sapp consists of a nervous drumming of a hickory stick on a queer-shaped skull.

It looks like a big year for the muggs. Come to think of it. It always has been a big year for the muggs.

So take a mugg's advice and don't get too smart.

Paste this on the windshield of the next car you steal.

James C. Mace, teacher of the Men's Bible Class of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue, will speak tomorrow morning on "The Trail Blazer."

Miss Succop Describes Union

A day with the Students' International Union in Geneva was vividly and most interestingly described to the Woman's City Club and its guests yesterday by Miss Mary Louise Succop. Miss Succop first told something of the inception of the union not quite five years ago when 25 students represented 15 countries. It now includes almost every country in the world. America sends the largest delegation and, unlike the other countries, divides the honors evenly between boys and girls.

The stimulating associations, the work, the interest, the recreation were all part of Miss Succop's talk as she went on to describe the last of the seven weeks' stay which is spent watching the League of Nations at work. This she termed "one of the most electric experiences in the world."

The students go home feeling two things, first, that what were formerly just so many colored spots on the map are now the homes of friends, and, second, that each must do his part in creating public opinion and in educating the world to be international minded, that there may be no more war.

Talks on Welfare

* * *

There are in the United States today vast areas not yet organized for public health welfare. Consequently, millions of children, either physically or mentally retarded, face ghastly conditions of neglect, said Miss Susan M. Boyd, a member of the White House Child Welfare and Health Commission, in her address to the College Club yesterday on "Recent Developments in Child Welfare."

Miss Boyd summarized the workings and purpose of the commission and stressed the great improvements being made in the care of children by the southern states.

The trained social worker of today is a true pioneer, she is required to enter into the subtleties of human relationships and variable environments which have to do with human needs and which challenge experience and knowledge, Miss Boyd said. In unemployment troubles, children are the real sufferers for their immediate growth, health and education are directly affected, she added.

Miss Boyd was formerly supervisor and deputy agent with the Board of Children's Guardians in Washington. Later she did pioneer social work with the Milbank Memorial Foundation in New York State, organizing county departments for public welfare. During the past year she has made a study of county organization for child welfare in seven states.

An "art exhibit" of old photographs of the members was one of the high lights of the thirty-first anniversary luncheon of the Turtle Creek Woman's Club, which was held yesterday in the Young Women's Christian Association. Mrs. E. J. Ocker directed the program and Mrs. Charles Milne was in charge of the luncheon. The former included a delightful reading of Barrie's "Rosalind" by Miss Helen V. Irwin; solo-piano solos by Miss Martha Hodgson, accompanied by Mrs. Ira L. Beckhart and piano duets by Miss Alberta Church and Mrs. Edith Yarnell.

Mrs. John Martin Mechlin, of Hanover, N. H., will be guest-speaker at the founder's day luncheon of Kappa Alpha Theta in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association next Saturday.

Sketches in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Jan. 17. The reign of the princess in the sartorial world has become tempered with softness. Now quite infrequently does one see the uncompromisingly severe silhouette that characterized the princess line of last winter. Bodices are not only slightly bloused, some of them are even definitely draped, while skirts have flounces and tiers to soften the line. The bolero really was the turning point of the severely moulded bodice, and when the bolero, the bertha and cape-like pieces began to be used, one knew that the appeal of the quite orthodox princess silhouette had ceased. The line at present obtaining is much kinder to the average figure than the princess line, and for this reason alone is to be welcomed. For while most of us make quite a tolerable appearance many of us are not the fortunate possessors of figures that can be deemed perfect. And the new frocks enable one to make a most charming appearance as well as permitting our figure to look its best.

* * *

THERE WAS A GALA turn-out for Jack Hylton, the English orchestra leader, when he appeared at the Theater des Champs Elysees. Smart costumes were the order of the evening and from the host of lovely clothes we selected two for sketching purposes always having in mind the readers of this page and their desire to know what the smartest women in Paris have chosen out of the wealth of creations to be found here. The dress to the left of delicate rose georgette was worn by a charmingly slim blonde young Parisienne. The bodice is draped in front with a cluster of camelias at the center. In back edging the rounding décolletage are two little flat cape-like pieces, just visible in the sketch. The straight hanging skirt has deep shirring set just above the hips. The waistline is high. Two loose flat folds will be noticed at the center of the front between the shirring.

* * *

AT THE RIGHT there is shown a sketch of a white velvet wrapped coat trimmed generously with white fox. There are no sleeves the coat being drawn around in cape fashion over the shoulder and arms. Over the hips the close-fitting peplum is encrusted with wide cartridge pleats. A white satin frock with a plain circular skirt just clearing the instep were worn with this wrap.

STEEL ADVANCE TESTING OUT PROSPERITY

Second Price Increase Seen as Indication That Favorable Turn Is Near

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The great iron masters of the country, convinced that business correction has gone far enough, are seeking to generate impulses which will gradually bring a return of prosperity.

Recognizing the widespread belief among business men that steel is the barometer of the industry, leaders of the industry have effected the second increase in prices in recent weeks. The steel manufacturers' extra on bars, shapes and plates for first quarter requirements. The moderate pickup in buying in response to these recent weeks after the initial price increase which tested the sentiment of large buyers, was interpreted in the industry as an index that the country is about ripe for a favorable turn in the business cycle.

Mr. Rukeyser

RELY ON AXIOM

From the sidelines it seems apparent that the guardians of the steel industry are relying on the old axiom that Americans would rather buy on a rising than a falling market. Whether the moderately higher prices will hold will, of course, depend on economic conditions. Technically the industry is in good shape with no distressing stocks of materials on hand. As a general rule the steel industry produces only against actual specifications of buyers. On the other hand the copper industry turns out more standardized material and is ordinarily tempted in slack times to pile up inventory. Last month, however, for the first time the new program of curtailment resulted in a decrease in the accumulated stocks of the copper industry.

The public is looking to the steel industry to an increasing extent for guidance. Having been burned last year in the premature winter and spring rally which incorrectly foretold events, speculators in stocks to an increasing extent are disposed to await tangible evidence of actual trade improvement before radically changing their attitude toward the market place.

ADVERTISING IMPORTANT

In suggesting how to prepare for the problems of business recovery, Paul T. Cherington business analyst says:

"One way to be ready for this recovery is to look upon advertising not as a matter of drawing pretty pictures and writing pretty copy, but as a matter of finding out something about the driving processes that make the wheels of business go. By surrounding it with romantic flummery we place advertising in a wrong light with economists and business men when in reality it is a cold blooded modern necessity of business.

"Advertising becomes increasingly important in times of business recovery, because whereas competition in a seller's market is a good-natured wrestling bout, in times of stress it becomes a matter of life and death."

TOM MIX FACES TRIAL IN ERIE

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 17.—Tom Mix hero of movie thrillers, will appear in court here Monday to answer the charge of Zack Miller, owner of the 101 Ranch shows, who contends Mix violated an agreement with his show a few years ago and appeared with the Sells-Floto shows.

For two weeks Mix has been busy at Peru, Ind., winter home of the Ringling shows, training horses for another summer on the road.

Miller is expected to offer testimony that Mix jumped a contract calling for a $10,000 weekly salary and transportation, and care of two horses, a Rolls-Royce automobile and an entourage of seven persons.

Mix, who was born and raised in Dubois, reported planning to visit his home town during his stay here to visit his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mix. Edward Mix, his father, who taught him to ride, died two years ago.

UNION WORKERS STRIKE HERE

Approximately 50 union workmen were reported on strike today, leaving their job on the new McClory building, Fifth avenue yesterday, because nonunion electrical workers had been engaged by the MacNeil Electrical Company. Alvin S. MacNeil, president of the company, asserted he was willing to employ union electricians, but was unable to obtain them because of action by the local union of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

MacNeil threatened to obtain a court injunction today against the brotherhood to restrain interference with the company's business. He said:

"I would put union men on the job tomorrow if I could get them, but I can't."

John Brookman, representing the Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers' Union, Local No. 2, said:

"We tried everything to get a settlement of this trouble, for we don't want to see any more men out of work in times like these."

Panama Installs Alfaro President

PANAMA CITY, Jan. 17.—(INS.)—The Republic of Panama looked today to the beginning of a new era in government as Ricardo J. Alfaro, former minister to the United States, assumed office as fifteenth president of the five Central American republic.

In a two-minute ceremony devoid of pomp and the usual grand flourishes that mark inaugurations, Senor Alfaro took the oath of office before the Supreme Court.

Miss Burr Resigns State Legal Office

HARRISBURG, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—M. Verity Burr, of Ebensburg, a state deputy attorney general since 1926, has announced she will resign from the position next Tuesday. She plans to practice law in Dauphin and Cambria counties.

Miss Burr, chairman of the Cambria County Council of Republican Women, is one of the few women attorneys in the state admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

Aircraft Exports Maintained Near Record Level

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—United States exports of aircraft products during the first 10 months of 1930 fell slightly below the record level of 1929, but registered a total twice as large as that of the comparable period in 1928, according to the aeronautic trade division, Department of Commerce.

Exports of complete aircraft, aircraft engines and parts (not including tires) during the 1930 period were valued at $7,288,014 as compared with $7,761,977 in the 1929 period, and $3,664,723 in the 1928 period.

Had it not been for the fact that foreign sales of complete aircraft to Latin American countries were lower during the 1930 period than during that of 1929, total exports would have shown an appreciable increase for aircraft engine sales were greater by over 31 per cent and an advance of more than 10 per cent was registered in sale of aircraft parts.

TRUCK ORDER DELIVERED

The International Harvester Company has just completed delivery of 10 trucks to the Pittsburgh Provision and Packing Company.

The Pittsburgh Provision and Packing Company was incorporated in 1901. This plant is located at Herrs Island. Together with the adjacent stock yards it occupies 30 acres of ground and provides employment to more than 600 people.

It is the maker of the famous Irish Brand hams and bacon, which is prepared under government inspection. A corp of government inspectors works with the plant employes from the time the animals are killed until they are cut, prepared for market, and stamped with the government stamp of approval.

This company operates three branch houses, one in Johnstown, one in Cumberland, Md., and one in Elkins, W. Va.

TWO CARS JAM AUTO, 4 HURT

When an automobile driven by James Allen, a Negro, of 3914 Penn avenue, became wedged between two street cars in Forbes street near Neville street, four passengers on one of the trolleys were hurt slightly last night. The injured were riding on a city-bound Swissvale, Rankin and Braddock car.

The victims were Miss Helen Boyd, of 1407 Morningside avenue; Allen Johnson, of 612 Baywood avenue; Mt. Lebanon; Nellie B. Brice, of 2015 Deran street, and H. Janssen, of 99 South Twenty-first street. They were given medical attention and sent home.

Police said the accident occurred when Allen attempted to pass a street car on the left and became lodged between it and another car. Allen and his passenger, Fred Robinson, of 4502 Boundary street, escaped injury. The automobile was wrecked and windows in both cars shattered.

When the car he was driving late last night crashed into a pole at Ardmore boulevard and Rockwood road, Forest Hills, C. Perry Kiefer, 53, of 311 West Hutchinson avenue, Edgewood, received lacerations. He was taken to the Braddock General Hospital.

$50,000 SUIT OVER OIL WELL

Claiming one of his oil wells has been ruined by salt water and that two others are threatened, M. M. Wally, of Etna, has filed suit for $50,000 damages in Common Pleas Court against W. H. Miller.

Wally says he drilled three wells known as Lyons No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 on an 80-acre lease in McCandless Township in 1920. He says Miller drilled a well on an adjoining lease only 50 feet from Lyons No. 1 the same year. All the wells were good producers. In 1927, he declares, Miller abandoned his well and drew out the casing, but did not plug the well, and refused to allow Wally to plug it. This caused salt water from the Murraysville salt sand to penetrate to the 100-foot sand, to which all the wells are drilled, according to the suit.

Business Quiet Says Bradstreet Table

Little change in business has been shown since the beginning of the year, according to the tabloid review of business conditions in the wholesale and jobbing trade, in retail trade, and in manufacturing and industry, compiled by Bradstreet for the past week.

Collections were slow in nearly every district covered by the report. Pittsburgh business was shown to be quiet in wholesale and jobbing, fair in retail trade and in manufacturing and slow in collections.

The table follows:

	Whol. and Job. Trade	Retail Trade	Mfg. and Industry	Collections
Pittsburgh	Quiet	Fair	Fair	Slow
Cleveland	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow

JANUARY STEEL IMPROVEMENT DISAPPOINTS

Pickup in Industry Relies Upon Gain in General Business; Rate Up 4'

By B. F. V. LUTY

At the close of the old year steel producers expected some seasonal increase in steel demand in January, but not much, yet the common view now is that the improvement although noticeable falls short of expectations. For a really substantial and important improvement an upturn in general business is considered requisite.

That is steel producers do not feel they have been getting less business than would be natural in view of the general business situation. There is a distinction from various times in the past when there were short spells of very light steel demand, not in keeping with trade generally. A good illustration of that condition fell in the summer of 1924, when July production was at only 54 per cent of the average rate in the three years 1923-4-5.

Steel ingot production in the week now ending may be estimated at about 44 per cent, which compares with a general rate of about 40 per cent in December if proper time is counted out for the big holiday of the month, and 45 per cent in November. For three successive weeks production has been mounting, from the very low rate in the week of Christmas, but this showing supplies little or no criterion for the future, since a portion of the production in the last fortnight has been against various orders placed in December and dated for shipment after January 1. That buying was special in a way, since in general buying for very prompt shipment is almost the invariable rule. It is a question whether the current rate of buying is sufficient to support production at the rate estimated for this week.

PRICES STABLE

Percentage rates of steel production are apt to be misleading both because they suggest 100 per cent as normal whereas in only an insignificant part of the time since the war has there been an operation of even 90 per cent, and because the percentages relate to present capacity, increased in recent years in a way dictated not by the consuming interests but by the individual desires of the steel producers. The steel industry had seven years of great activity, 1923 to 1929, inclusive, with but short and slight interruptions. The daily rate of ingot production during the seven years was 146,000 tons, while the present rate is about 89,000 tons, or more than 60 per cent of the average.

The whole finished steel price structure has now been stable for more than a month. Previously there had been cutting in various lines, apart from the general market declines. Lines that were irregular were stabilized partly by cutting being eliminated and partly by cut prices being recognized as the open market. There is now a test whether steady prices will stimulate demand, as some observers had predicted when stabilization was only a hope. A chance of higher prices would be a more stimulating influence, but producers doubt whether any attempts to advance prices for second quarter can be made without there being a materially heavier demand than now exists.

GLASS TRADE ACTIVITIES ROUTINE

Production and Distribution Of Flat Glass Products Holding at Low Levels

With both the production and distribution of flat glass products holding at practically the same low levels as at the beginning of the year, the past week's activities in this branch of the industry were largely of a routine nature, according to American Glass Review.

The slight improvement evidenced earlier in the month in demand for window glass was hardly discernible during the week, and marketing conditions in this branch continue rather unsatisfactory. Such business as has been placed by the jobbing trade since completion of inventories was largely for early requirements, with little evidence that stocks are being replenished to any appreciable extent.

Production of window glass is understood to be about in keeping with demand. Making of glass was scheduled to start this week at the American Window Glass Company's large Fourcault machine plant in Arnold, Pa. Two other window glass factories, the Interstate plant in Mt. Jewett, Pa., and the National Flat Glass Company's plant at Independence, Kan., recently closed down, however.

Movement of plate glass continued along quiet lines this week. With resumption of activities in the automobile industry the outlook is for an early stimulus in demand for this product. During the week operations were resumed at the Ford Motor Company's plant in Glassmere, Pa., after a several weeks' shutdown.

The demand for rough, rolled and wire glass products evidenced comparatively little change, with factory operations in this branch on a curtailed basis.

Commuters Protest Dropping of 2 Trains

Youghiogheny Valley commuters have presented a petition bearing 71 signatures to Watson McKee, secretary of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce, protesting annullment of two Baltimore and Ohio Railroad trains.

Persons residing between McKeesport and Connellsville are affected by the curtailment and the chamber may file a protest with the railroad company, it was indicated today.

"What Qualities I Admire In a Young Woman" will be discussed tomorrow evening at the meeting of the Y. P. C. U., of the North United Presbyterian Church, North Side. Larry Kurtz will be leader of the meeting.

BUREAU TESTING STREET JOBS

A number of city streets, under process of construction or recently completed, were being examined today by the City Bureau of Tests, following discovery by the Department of Public Works that Fifteenth street, recently paved, did not come up to specifications.

As a result of the Fifteenth street disclosures, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang ordered Dominick Pavia Company, the contractors, to tear up the concrete and relay it according to specifications. The Pavia Company had not received payment for the job, but Lang refused to accept the street for the city at a reduced price.

He said:

"I want good streets and I have determined that no shortage of materials or workmanship will be tolerated. I demand a new street rather than a cash allowance for defects.

"That is the trouble with a number of thoroughfares laid years ago. They didn't come up to specifications and the city is reaping the benefits now with breakdowns caused by heavy traffic."

Lang said no final payments on such projects would be made until they had been O. K'd by the Bureau of Tests.

VETS INSTALL CAMP OFFICERS

Officers of the Maj. William H. Davis Camp, No. 98, United Spanish War Veterans, were installed at a dinner of the past and present officers last night in the Duquesne Club. The officers, about 30 in number, were guests of Edward M. Power, Jr., retiring commander. Past Commander-in-Chief Oscar T. Taylor was in charge of the installation.

Following the installation Deputy Inspector Charles F. Armstrong spoke. The new officers are: Commander, William S. Haddock; senior vice commander, George H. Deike; junior vice commander, D. A. Ansbultz; officer of the day, Fred W. Morgan; officer of the guard, A. V. Cookston; trustees, John Corbit and Oscar T. Taylor; members of county council, Robert S. Cain and William J. Best.

Lutheran Session Approves Budgets

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—The 1931 budgets of the various synods in the United States, Canada, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands were approved by the Lutheran Board of American Missions in quarterly meeting here. This and other routine matters were the only subjects taken up. Nineteen of the 21 members of the board attended the meeting.

Tire Prices Reduced By Rubber Concern

JEANNETTE, Pa., Jan. 17.—W. O. Rutherford, president of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, has announced revised prices on passenger car tires, meeting the recent move of the industry in reducing prices. No changes were made in prices of truck and bus casings or tubes. The reductions range from 8 to 12 per cent.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Forbes

Large Buyer Causes Fire Price-Cutting

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

PRICE-CUTTING has been urged by certain economists as necessary to stimulate freer buying and to hasten the return of normal industrial activity and employment. But there is price-cutting and price-cutting. In rubber, for example, we have an industry which broadly speaking has been on a non-dividend basis for years. The low prices ruling for common shares — and even preferred shares of the largest rubber companies tell the sorrowful tale.

Price-fixing can have disadvantages and can sometimes go so far as to be criminal. But deliberate price-cutting to a point where a whole vital industry is plunged into depression, where stockholders and employes alike suffer, surely is regrettable and condemnable. A chronically-depressed industry benefits nobody but hurts the national well-being.

Surely it would be in the public interest, in the national interest, if there were sufficient understanding and co-operation among America's rubber manufacturers to establish prices yielding a reasonable legitimate profit. It is a sad commentary upon our rubber leaders that their vast industry can be upset, as they allege by a leading mail-order house, a concern which does not manufacture a single tire. Things have come to a lamentable pass when an industry of the inveterate of the rubber industry can be dominated and prostrated by a single retail buyer and seller.

Hats off to the power wielded by this mail-order house! Car owners cannot be blamed for regarding them as their friends and champions. The ordinary consumer cannot be expected to lose any sleep over the fundamental economics involved. He wants tires at the lowest price. The big mail-order firm forces all manufacturers, apparently, to make drastic reductions. Why not regard them as real benefactors?

In the end, of course, tire consumers, wage earners and everybody else pay through the nose for unsound economic practices.

THE BATTLE between Ford and General Motors for supremacy in the low-priced motor field is being watched with lively interest. Chevrolet gained a clear lead during Ford's long shutdown while the new model was being brought into being. Ford's re-entry was hailed with enthusiasm and with a deluge of buying orders. He swiftly recovered first place.

Last month, however, Chevrolet passed Ford, thanks to the improved Chevrolet design brought out in November. In addition to Chevrolet, General Motors has other low-priced cars which swell its total output in that field.

The decline in Ford sales fostered rumors that he was planning another new car, of eight cylinders. Edsel Ford issued an emphatic denial and expressed the hope and belief that 30,000,000 of the present make would be turned out.

In the industry the opinion is voiced confidentially that within a few years only half a dozen automobile companies of any magnitude will be in the ring. The expectation is that the strongest will become stronger.

Yet in almost every line of business up pops an occasional David capable of living and thriving against the Goliaths.

WHILE CHATTING the other day with John D. Rockefeller, Jr., he mentioned a little incident not without interest to aspiring business men.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., has cut down his daily golf game by one hole. His son remarked:

"That is characteristic of my father. It takes courage for a man to admit to himself that he can't do what he used to be able to do. Many men would continue to try to keep up appearances even though they knew this was really unwise and bad for them. But my father always has the courage of his convictions. So—he is now in his ninety-second year—when he felt that it would be better for his health to attempt less, he simply did it."

I am taking the liberty of repeating this conversation, without Mr. Rockefeller's express permission, because I know not a few men who are foolishly trying to keep up appearances because they haven't sufficient courage to act in accordance with their altered circumstances. In other words, they are hurting themselves by keeping up a bluff.

Isn't the veteran oil king's method and philosophy much sounded and wiser?

Lloyd George Marks His 68th Birthday

LONDON, Jan. 17. (AP.)—David Lloyd George, leader of the British Liberal party, today celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday. The veteran Welsh statesman recently suffered a shearing of his abundant locks, which went white during the war. Mr. Lloyd George has betrayed few signs of decreasing physical vitality. He was British prime minister during much of the war.

ALEXANDER D. WALTER

WALTER JOINS AD FIRM

Alexander W. Walter, a prominent figure in Pittsburgh advertising for the past 20 years, has become a partner in Gummerson & Martin, Inc., advertising agency, and the firm name has been changed to Gummerson, Martin & Walter.

Mr. Walter began his advertising career in 1910 with the George Blackiston Advertising Agency, one of the pioneer advertising firms of the city. Previously he had spent several years in sales work. He at one time was advertising manager for W. W. Lawrence & Co., and later established his own advertising agency.

In 1923 he joined the staff of Backer, Duff & Morris, going to the W. S. Hill Company in 1926, which he left for his present connection. Mr. Walter has a wide advertising experience that includes association with a number of national advertisers, particularly those in the building, electrical, glass, machinery, paint, petroleum and steel fields.

SCHOOL OPENS NEW CLASS

Pittsburgh School of Accountancy announces that on Wednesday evening, January 21, at 6 o'clock, a new class in accountancy and business administration will hold its opening session. The class will be taught by C. W. Salmond, C. A., secretary and treasurer of the Castalia Portland Cement Company; A. Roy Carson, manager, Vulcan Detinning Company, and D. S. Thomas, LL.B., a practicing attorney.

Small classes, personal attention, individual instruction, and tutoring without extra charge when necessary are the bases under which the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy is credited with being one of the leading professional schools in Western Pennsylvania.

FIRES DAMAGE TWO HOMES

The home of Munziotto Pirozzi, 4629 Torley street, was damaged $1,000 by fire early today. The building, a two-story frame structure, was burned at the rear of the second floor. The cause of the fire is undetermined. The Pirozzi family was absent at the time.

Fire following an explosion said by police, to have been due to a leaking gas line above a cellar furnace, damaged the home of Paul Kuhnert, of 93 Spruce street, Natrona, yesterday. Kuhnert, a widower, and five children were seated about a table at meal time when the blast occurred, but escaped the burning dwelling without aid, police reported. Natrona and Nattona Heights firemen extinguished the fire, which caused an estimated loss of $2,000.

Davis for 44-Hour Week in U. S. Work

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Senator James J. Davis, told the Federal Employes Union of Philadelphia, he favored the 44-hour work-week for government workers with no reduction in pay.

The Senator, speaking at a testimonial dinner in his honor, reiterated his contention that the Federal government should set an example for employes in the matter of working conditions and salaries.

Trusts Show Increased Fixed Return

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

INCREASED RETURN FROM normal income sources has been one favorable factor found in the annual reports of many of the investment trusts of the management type. While nearly all of these companies have reported losses from the sale of securities and a substantial depreciation in the value of their holdings, a very large share of them has shown greater revenue from dividends and interest.

This change may be taken as an indication of a trend towards the adoption of sounder investment policies. The investment trusts have been paying less attention to speculative activities and more to the placing of their resources in securities which yield a satisfactory return. Slowly the lesson of the past year has been making itself apparent and has been forcing investment trust managements to get into legitimate activities.

If these new policies are continued in force, the great majority of management trusts may be expected to build portfolios which will greatly increase their regular income during the present year. Were it not for the fact that switches in holdings would entail large losses, this change would take place even more rapidly.

Losses Below Average

FOLLOWING THE PUBLICATION of the first comments on the annual reports of investment trusts in this column, several securities houses pointed to the fact that a large number of investment trusts have shown a smaller percentage of decrease in the value of their holdings than has been shown in the average price of stocks listed on the New York Exchange. These investment bankers have expressed the opinion that, where such favorable comparisons exist, the investment trust managements have justified themselves.

Naturally, only an investment trust operating under exceptional conditions would avoid showing depreciation in the value of its holdings during 1930. A management which has been able to report a smaller depreciation in holdings than that of the average price of stocks has certainly demonstrated that it has been able to select preferable types of investments.

Mistakes Made in Organization

GRANTING THAT THE record of many investment trusts has been favorable from this standpoint, the fact remains that many mistakes in companies of this type were made at the time of their formation.

The cases in which the original portfolios did not provide fixed income sufficient to warrant the existence of the companies have been only too numerous. The mere fact that so many of these companies were organized with trading profits as their primary objective, indicates that most management trusts formed in this country started off in the wrong direction. If the managements were the brilliant authorities on market conditions, which they claimed to be, few investment companies would have been formed during 1928 and 1929 and they would not have been caught so heavily loaded with high-priced stocks when the break came.

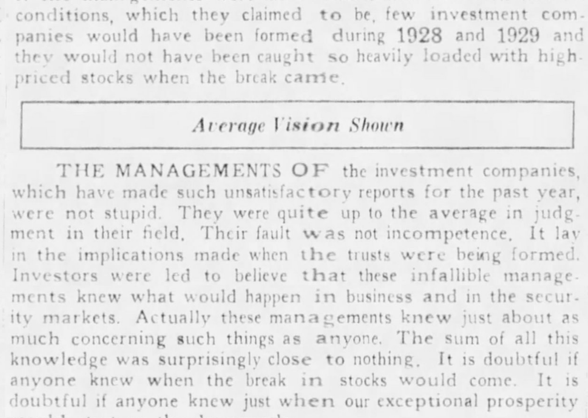
Average Vision Shown

THE MANAGEMENTS OF the investment companies, which have made such unsatisfactory reports for the past year, were not stupid. They were quite up to the average in judgment in their field. Their fault was not incompetence. It lay in the implications made when the trusts were being formed. Investors were led to believe that these infallible managements knew what would happen in business and in the security markets. Actually these managements knew just about as much concerning such things as anyone. The sum of all this knowledge was surprisingly close to nothing. It is doubtful if anyone knew when the break in stocks would come. It is doubtful if anyone knew just when our exceptional prosperity would start on the down-grade.

Several commentators did predict the break shortly before it occurred, but investigation shows that a large share of these had been saying that the end of the boom was near for several years before it happened. Naturally they would be right if they only stayed with their story long enough, but anyone who had gone short of stocks when their first alarm was given would have been in a sorry plight.

The appraisal of the investment trust managements may be resolved into this: They were not below the average in wisdom. They merely claimed to have a keener knowledge of finance than can be found in most ordinary mortals. They undoubtedly must have realized that a break would come some day. Their failure was in refusing to admit this possibility and in neglecting to guard against it.

Construction Volume 17% Lower in 1930



WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—A decrease of 17 per cent in the volume of construction performed in the United States during 1930, as compared with the previous year, is reported in the current issue of the Constructor, official publication of the Associated General Contractors of America.

Charts prepared by the association show the average monthly performance during the year, as determined by shipments of basic construction materials, at index No. 163, as compared with an average of 196 for the previous year and 188 for the preceding five-year period. December construction volume dropped to index No. 123, a decrease of 29 per cent from the previous month and 27 per cent less than in December, 1929.

As yet there is no statistical indication that the bottom in construction activity has been reached or that the upturn is just ahead, according to the Constructor's editorial comment. It points out that in all classifications, except those of educational and public buildings, reports of contemplated projects, compiled by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, continue to show lower totals than those of the corresponding months a year ago. Any future rise in construction activity will be preceded for several months by a notable rise in the reports of contemplated projects, it states, and since this rise is not yet in evidence it appears patent that activity in private construction during 1931 probably will not exceed that of 1930.

FOUR MEN HELD IN STILL RAIDS

Three moonshine stills were seized by prohibition agents who arrested four men in three raids yesterday.

At 250 Lombard street, a 75-gallon still and several barrels of mash were found, agents said. Joe Tottino, 24, and Joseph Oliver, 38, were arrested, it was reported.

Joe Biccelli, 32, was arrested, raiders said, following the seizure of a 100-gallon still in a building at 813 Flemington avenue.

A shack in Lower Burrel Township, Westmoreland County, yielded the agents a 50-gallon still they reported. Robert Rogers, 23, was arrested, according to the raiders.

Real Estate

A new seven-room brick house with two tile baths and a two-car garage at 308 Hazel drive, Mt. Lebanon, has been sold by Paul Del Grande, builder, to C. R. Fish. Del Grande has accepted in part payment a six-room house in Waltham avenue, Dormont, according to the Colonial Realty Company of Pittsburgh, brokers.

The same brokers have sold for the State Capital Savings and Loan Association to Glenn N. Morrow a six-room home and two-car garage at 416 Arden road, Mt. Lebanon. Two business lots in the Central Place plan, Cochran road, Mt. Lebanon, have been sold by the same brokers for Carlo Ochiuto to Trilli & Dunbar. Ochiuto has taken as part payment a six-room house at 230 Olivet avenue.

R. A. McCrady of the McCrady-Rodgers Company will address members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board at the organization's weekly luncheon next Tuesday in the William Penn Hotel. McCrady's subject will be "Everything in the Construction of a House from Foundation to Roof."

Shirley D. Claffey has sold to Allegheny County an improved property on a lot 30x150 feet, in South Park avenue, East Pittsburgh, for $22,000.

Fred K. Becker has sold to C. E. Christman an English type home of nine rooms, three baths and a two-car garage on a lot 185x200 feet, at Roycroft avenue and Mt. Lebanon boulevard. George H. Dunn, Mt. Lebanon realtor, made the sale.

A lot 40x100 feet, in Black street, Eleventh Ward, has been deeded by Edith and Charles H. W. Gernert to William P. Gillissie for $2,500.

Applications for building permits follow:

Eighteenth Ward—F. C. Bittner, addition, 605 Warrington avenue, $1,250.

LITTLE CHANGE IN LOCAL TRADE

January Clearance Sales Help to Keep Up Volume Of Business at Retail

Since the beginning of the new year there has been comparatively little change in retail and jobbing circles, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Business continues quiet, although January clearance sales are helping to some extent in keeping up the volume of business at retail.

Jobbers of dry goods, men's and women's wearing apparel and shoes report buying thus far almost entirely for filling in purposes, and future orders are still very light, although some improvement is looked for at the end of this week.

Jewelry sales are extremely slow, and the volume of business transacted last year was materially below normal. Furniture sales have been quiet both at wholesale and retail, as time payment houses as well as regular retail trade had been adversely effected.

CANDY TRADE QUIET

Lumber and other building materials have been moving slowly with construction work, particularly of dwellings, in smaller volume than for several years. Hardware, paint and chemical lines are in comparatively light demand at this time, although some improvement is anticipated with the approach of spring. The movement of groceries and provisions is somewhat below normal and jobbers of confectionery and cigars report trade very quiet.

Demand for sanitary and heating equipment continues slow, and there has been no improvement in the demand for electrical equipment. Automobile accessories are moving rather slowly, but the automobile show next week is expected to stimulate business in this line. Production of crude oil continues at a somewhat lower rate, and further attempts are being made to reduce the rate of production still lower. Prices are showing somewhat steadiness in some sections.

While there has been a slight improvement in collections, the majority of the reports received still continue to average slow.

REAL ESTATE LOANS HIGH

NEWARK, Jan. 17.—A disbursement of $177,582,378 in real estate mortgage loans was made during the year 1930 by the Prudential Insurance Company of America. These loans, which were general in scope and not restricted to any particular territory in the United States or Canada, were made on dwellings, apartment houses, mercantile buildings and on farms.

As in previous years the loans on dwellings were greater than on all other properties together, this class of real estate showing 17,163 individual loans for a total of $93,244,913. The dwellings involved provided living accommodations for 19,444 families. There were 846 apartment loans for a total of $17,783,182, these furnishing living quarters for 7,930 families.

There was a marked increase in farm loans during 1930, the records showing 6,068 of these for a total of $30,036,947, as against 3,750 loans in 1929 for the sum of $19,244,361.

Northwestern Car Loadings Decline

GOLD DUST NET ABOUT $3.50 A SHARE

Profit for 1930 Makes Satisfactory Comparison In View of Price Levels

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Gold Dust Corporation for 1930 will report a net profit of approximately $3.50 a share on the 1,788,052 no par shares of common stock outstanding. This will compare with $7,586,963 or $4.03 a share in 1929. The company closed the year with between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 cash on hand after retiring all its funded debt with the exception of sightly more than $1,000,000 American Cotton Oil 8s still outstanding. A year ago funded debt totaled $24,900,000.

Gold Dust for some years has been a large lender of money in the call money market, having maintained a substantial cash balance in its treasury. Early in 1928, when the bulk of business of American Linseed Company was solicited, this company was one that complied.

LOAN PROFITS LESS

A year ago call loans totaled $7,700,000 and cash $5,481,755, a total of $21,181,755. Of the decline in earnings of 83 cents a share in 1930 from 1929 roughly 20 cents a share was due to the lower call money rates obtainable last year.

In view of the severe commodity price decline which occurred last year and the decreased volume of sales, Gold Dust's showing for 1930 may be regarded as a creditable one. Sales held up close to the 1929 level during the first eight months of the year, but a decline set in in the last four months, presumably due to the lower consumer buying power which apparently was not felt in the food and grocery trade until the later months of the year.

MARGARINE SALES OFF

The soap business last year was fairly good, but that never has provided a large part of Gold Dust's income. The mayonnaise and salad dressing division also was good, while the flour and cereal sales of the Standard Milling division were satisfactory. Sales of nut butter and margarine were adversely affected by the decline in butter prices to record low levels, which discouraged the use of substitutes. However, the low price of cocoanut oil which goes into nut butter, turpentine used in shoe polishes and of raw materials for soap, all helped the margin of profits in these products. Due to the steady decline which occurred over the year, some inventory losses were inevitable in spite of careful buying.

FIRM OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

The one-hundredth anniversary of the Logan-Gregg Hardware Company, one of the oldest business organizations of Pittsburgh, is being celebrated by officers and employes. The firm is located at 121-29 Ninth street.

The firm was started as Logan & Kennedy in 1831 by John F. Logan and Robert F. Kennedy. At that time the population of Pittsburgh totaled 15,000 persons and the chief forms of transportation were the stage coach, conestoga wagon and river boats.

The first home of the company was at 68 Wood street. The building was threatened by the great downtown fire of 1845 but was saved when the fire did not come north of Diamond alley. In 1894 the company purchased the Arbuckle & Co. warehouse in Seventh street which business was destroyed by fire in 1914. The erection of the new Ninth street building followed shortly after the fire.

WOMAN FILES $100,000 SUIT

Suit for $100,000 damages has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Mrs. Anna Wyland against the Manufacturers Finance Acceptance Corporation of Baltimore as an aftermath of her acquittal January 8 in Criminal Court, in the first case called before Judge John P. Eagen, of a charge of attempting to defraud the finance company out of an automobile. She says her reputation and character were damaged that amount.

In the Criminal Court case it was shown that the woman's husband had signed a lease for an automobile and, upon leaving Pittsburgh, had taken the car with him. When the payments were not kept up the finance company had the wife arrested. She says she was kept in jail eight days before being freed on bail. Judge Eagen directed a verdict of not guilty against the woman because she had not signed the lease for the car.

Stock Exchange Topics

Market Observers Show Leaning Toward Rail Group of Stocks

Market observers are showing an increasingly strong leaning toward the rails as the group. The rail stocks are held up in place of other groups for various reasons. Among the factors which seem to mark the market as ripe for a rally is the belief that a group which has been depressed as long as the rails, and which is perhaps the most unpopular group in the market, is a tempting one for the bull element on the board. Moreover, the rails have a wide earning power, and it is expected that the roads will be better for the year. That the companies will put a strong foot on expenditures, and last but not least, it is calculated that railroad stocks are more strongly held than some other groups, many of the public interested in them through the split market was of nonfinancial proportions.

Bethlehem Steel appeared to have been singled out by the bear element as the principal target for operations in the course of trading yesterday. That stock had to withstand the pressure of heavy and persistent offerings. Selling was rather well taken most of the day, but the stock showed only feeble rallying power. Perhaps widespread discussion of the matter of official bonuses has had a disturbing influence and may be influencing some of the selling. But offerings were accompanied by estimates of earnings for the final quarter which were not particularly favorable. These estimates placed probable net to be shown for the December period around 55 to 60 cents a share for the common stock, which would bring net for the year to approximately $5.65 a share, or somewhat under full dividend requirements at the current $6 rate. Bethlehem directors are expected to meet in the final week of the month when earnings will be released and action taken on the dividend.

Heavy reduction in earning assets combined with marked expansion of gold reserve figures is reflection in the ratio of reserves to deposits and note liabilities in this week's condition statements of the New York Reserve Bank and the system. The total amount of reserve credit in use was reduced by $137,000,000 and is now $190,000,000 less than at the same period a year ago. The reduction is accounted for chiefly by contraction in member bank indebtedness and by shrinkage in reserve holdings of open market bills and government securities. Note circulation tapered off sharply both at New York and throughout the system, marking the return flow of currency put out against holiday demands. The reserve ratio at New York is now 82 per cent, against 71.6 per cent a year ago, while that of the system is 79.3 per cent, as against 75.4 per cent this time last year.

Corporation stockholders are not coming in for much in the way of new subscription "rights" these days. An offering of stock on a basis which serves to create these "rights" is something of an exception just now rather than the rule as it was through the latter part of 1928 and most of 1929. Thus the announcement of an offering of 567,000 shares of additional common to its stockholders by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company is of more than passing interest. The new stock is offered at $25 a share in the ratio of one new share for each 10 shares held as of the close on January 26, next. On the basis of current market values for the stock, the accruing "rights" have an indicated value of about $2.

Bears are emphasizing the probable importance of unfavorable earnings reports for the fourth quarter and for the year 1930. Those inclined to take a long position during favorable opportunities, however, maintain that if business improves moderately, the more cheerful trade reports which could be forthcoming might offset the influence of unsatisfactory earnings. Conservatives, bearing both sides, hold the opinion that irregularity is most logical.

Chemical shares seem to have lost their trading popularity, due to the uncertain conditions which have developed in that industry recently. Considerable liquidation has been reported in some of those stocks. Interests identified with the industry have expressed the opinion that a change for the better should develop by the middle of the year, and that as a result the earnings of the leading chemical concerns in the final six months of 1931 should make a much better showing than those for the first half of the year. Floor traders who often have been active in the market for some of the chemical shares have transferred their operations to other issues in recent sessions.

Pittsburgh Packard Reports Net Profit

The Packard Motor Company of Pittsburgh reports net profit of $167,694 for the year 1930, after setting up ample reserves for income tax, depreciation, bad debts and bonuses to employes. A 10 per cent dividend was paid on December 31, and $177,694 was transferred to surplus account. The company's inventory shows $330,532 invested in new cars and $13,500 invested in used cars.

Medical Heads Here Go to Harrisburg

Dr. John D. Kistler, president of the Homeopathic Medical Society of Pennsylvania, Dr. H. S. Nicholson, chairman of the legislative committee of the society, and Dr. I. D. Metzgar, member of the state board of medical licensure, are attending a joint conference of medical legislative committees in Harrisburg. They will consider changes in the medical practice act sponsored by the Pennsylvania Medical Society. The new bill will be presented to the Legislature in February.

Associated Makes Offer for Utility

Holders of Rochester Central Power Corporation 6 per cent cumulative preferred and 5 per cent gold debentures series A, due September 1, 1958, are being offered the opportunity to exchange their holdings, for $6 dividend series preferred and 5 per cent convertible gold debentures, due 1950, of Associated Gas and Electric Company. The preferred stock is exchangable on a share for share basis and the debentures on a par for par basis.

Liverpool Wheat Lowest in 350 Years

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Statisticians in seeking comparative prices for yesterday's record low values of wheat announced they had to go back 350 years to the times of Queen Elizabeth to find a period when prices were so low in Liverpool as at present.

A crop in that leading European wheat mart yesterday took prices close to the minimum reached there two weeks ago and helped to lower quotations in American markets, although the latter are higher than in other countries owing to the Stabilization Corporation's activities.

All of the 1930 options were softer yesterday owing to selling by government sponsored agencies, who have held last year's crop some 15 cents above prices quoted for the July option of the 1931 harvests.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

SPALDING 1930 SALES SHOW INCREASE

Net Income Down, However, Due to Higher Costs in Retail Sales Department

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—In spite of the general depression last year, A. G. Spalding & Bros. established a new high record on sales, although net income suffered somewhat as compared with the previous year.

Both sales and net income were maintained at the beginning of the year, but the effect of the depression was apparent in the later months of June and October. The final results for the year showed an increase of 3 per cent on wholesale volume, but a decrease of 11.5 per cent in retail sales, against 1929.

Foreign branches of Spalding, on the whole showed an increase over 1929, particularly Canadian and English, while the French company continued to operate at a loss. The results of the Australian company have not been included in the consolidated report, of operations since outside stockholders own five-twelfths of its share capital. Its fiscal year closed on June 30, 1930, and showed a small increase in sale, but a decrease of 24 per cent in net income.

SALES COST GAINS

The anomaly of larger total sales, but smaller income is attributable to greater expenses, principally in the retail end of the business. The additional expense was composed mainly of increases in salaries of sales and clerical forces and commissions of $120,000, totals $345,000, and legal expenses, $30,000.

Total the $28,109,216 in the year ended October 31, last, Spalding's sales compared with $27,886,333 in the previous year, an increase of $213,883. The cost of sales last year was $26,167,321, or 93.1 per cent of total sales, and compared with a ratio of 91.7 per cent in the previous year.

NET $1,635,484

Net income of $1,635,484, after charges, was the smallest of the past three years, and marked a reduction of 20 per cent compared with the year ended October 30, 1929. The ratio of net to sales last year was 5.8 per cent, while in 1929 it was 7.3 per cent and in 1927, 5.5 per cent.

Income from sources other than operations has been a factor of some importance to Spalding. In the last four years, it has ranged from 14.7 per cent to 19.8 per cent of total net income. Such "other income" represents chiefly interest on stocks and bonds and other investments.

OBITUARY

Foster Funeral

Funeral services will be held Monday for Mrs. Margaret Brown Foster, wife of H. George Foster, who died Tuesday in her home at 812 Maplewood avenue, Ambridge. Funeral services will be held in St. Veronica's Catholic Church and burial will be in St. Martin's Cemetery, Ambridge. Mrs. Foster was born in England and received her education in the Notre Dame Training College. She later became principal of schools in England and came to this country in 1909. Beside her husband she leaves a daughter, Dorothy Foster.

Friedman Funeral

Funeral services for Morris Friedman, realtor and secretary of the Automobile Finance Company, who died yesterday in his home, 1316 Beechwood boulevard, will be held Sunday afternoon. He was a member of the Rodef Shalom and Poale Zadek congregations, Fraternity Lodge, F. & A. M., and Lodge No. 705, McKeesport Elks. He was vice president of the Friedman Real Estate Company. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Ella Baer Friedman; three sons, Townsend, Bernard and Harold Friedman, and a daughter, Ruth Doris Friedman.

JUDGE APPOINTS RECEIVER HERE

W. J. Robinson has been appointed temporary receiver of the Equitable Casualty and Surety Company of New York, which has offices in the First National Bank Building, Pittsburgh, by Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas Court.

The action was asked by C. C. Murphy, who said that a receiver appointed in New York December 31 had threatened to take over the funds and assets of the company in Pennsylvania.

He said the company has about 5,000 policyholders in Pennsylvania and liabilities of $4,000,000 in this state, and also is obligated to the State Department of Revenue for gasoline tax bonds to the amount of about $2,000,000.

VALLEY MILLS ADD WORKERS

Eight hundred men will return to work at Niles, O., during the coming week when the Falcon plant of Empire Steel Corporation resumes operations. Part of these workers will return to the Falcon plant on January 18. The entire 800 men will be employed by mid-week.

A bulge in demand for automobile steel accounts for the increase in Empire Steel operations. The Empire plants in the Youngstown district have not operated so far in 1931.

Coal Output at High Point in Somerset

SOMERSET, Pa., Jan. 17.—Somerset County this week produced more coal than any week since 1917, when the output was the largest in history. An increase of 571 cars was dispatched during the week, a total of 2,613 being loaded.

PERSHING FACED FRICTION IN FRANCE

Inaction at Home Adds to Worries of Commander in Early Days Across Sea

ma[illegible] such considerable forces transported from the other side of the Atlantic."

[illegible] weeks, either of individuals or formally approved a draft of [illegible], might be as the plan for this first operation, [illegible] landing and strand which, at that time, we calculated with [illegible] respective forces [illegible] could be carried out in [illegible] successes were in the following spring or summer [illegible] suggested later.

[illegible] that we would be. A suggestion was made by [illegible] would be a reasonable the better. Mission in America [illegible] of a separate that we should operate on the [illegible] operating in Vosges front, but success there [illegible] although it was could have had no decisive effect. suspected that this was not the fact since no vital arteries of any reason and that after all communication not important the Allies were not keen for us enemy territory lay beyond the to have an independent combat Vosges, and the idea was not army. seriously considered.

There was certainly a sentiment among them in some quarters that while our entry into the war was necessary to bring victory we had come in late and therefore could not expect much credit for what we should do.

The thought [illegible] some [illegible] the attitude of the [illegible] Allies regarding the [illegible] two other nations, whose entry into the war was eagerly [illegible] and [illegible] in Allied circles for the selfish desire of being [illegible] on the winning side at the end of the war.

[illegible] first it was never even hinted that we were [illegible] by [illegible] motives, but there is little [illegible] that the formation of an American army was not looked [illegible] with favor.

Our belief in the existence of such an attitude on the part of the Allies naturally stirred in our minds a feeling of distrust, which was emphasized by their later efforts to dominate, and which therefore, continued to be a factor in all our relations up to the end.

[illegible] consist of the various [illegible] suggestions and schemes [illegible] of the Allies, the idea remained [illegible] even in my mind that the [illegible] nature of our troops, their proper training and their best strategical use all demanded their concentration into an American army instead of being allotted beyond control as replacements in the ranks of the Allied armies. In fact, every consideration dictated that our army should in its sense be in a subordinate relation to the others, but that we should plan from the start to build up our own independent organization.

Yield to French
Americans Sent for Moral Effect

Gen. Pershing's expedition is being sent abroad on the urgent insistence of Marshal Joffre.

Marshal Joffre and the French mission that a force, however small, be sent to produce a moral effect. We have yielded to this view and a force is being sent solely to produce a moral effect. If all necessary arrangements are not made on the other side, it is the fault of the French General Staff and not of ourselves, since their officers were and are fully cognizant of our unprepared state for sending a serious expedition for serious business.

"Our General Staff had made no plan (so far as known to the Secretary of War) for prompt dispatch of reinforcements to Gen. Pershing, nor the prompt dispatch of considerable forces to France. . . . But it seems evident that what the French General Staff is now concerned about is the establishment of the important base and line of communication for a much larger force than Gen. Pershing will have.

"They evidently think that having yielded to the demand for a small force for moral effect, it is quite soon to be followed by a large force for physical effect. Thus far we have no plans for this. . . ."

In Quandary
Authorities Are Puzzled About Necessities

Figuratively speaking, then, when the assistant chief of staff went to look in the secret files where the plans concerning the situation that confronted us should have been found, the pigeonhole was empty.

In other words, the War Department was face to face with the question of sending an army to Europe and found that the General Staff had never considered such a thing. No one in authority had any definite idea how many men might be needed, how they should be organized and equipped, nor where the tonnage to transport and supply them was to come from.

As already noted, both the Joffre and Pallieul missions did not hesitate to make proposals regarding the employment of Americans, and each had expressed the hope that our man

Synopsis of Pershing's Story Appears in Sunday's Sun-Telegraph

Accompanying the seventh installment of Pershing's Own Story of the War in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, a complete and comprehensive synopsis of preceding chapters that have appeared since Monday, will be printed. This will give readers who have missed the early chapters an opportunity to begin the story at the very start.

The first two test questions in the Pershing educational contest, in which the Sun-Telegraph is offering $3,000 in cash prizes, will be published tomorrow. Readers who follow tomorrow's synopsis and installment will be able to answer these questions by closely reading the story as it appears in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy, head of the Red Cross in France, and his assistant, Mr. James H. Perkins, called at my headquarters June 17 to discuss cooperation with the army. It was decided the Red Cross could best handle its work if given a semi-official status, so Maj. Murphy was attached to my headquarters.

Maj. Murphy.

It was the French situation that gave me the gravest concern. Pacifist sentiment was prevalent in France and in many quarters there was talk of a peace parley. This pessimistic and despondent mood of the people further depressed the morale of their armies as men at the front contemplated another winter of suffering and distress for their families.

To help meet these conditions, I suggested to Maj. Murphy that the first task of the Red Cross should be to aid needy French people. As a result, he and Perkins proposed that funds be distributed to soldiers' families wherever necessary.

When the idea was presented to Gen. Petain he expressed the keenest appreciation and at once undertook through his military organization to obtain the necessary data. The Red Cross arranged to make 5,000,000 francs (nearly $1,000,000) available to be distributed by local charitable agencies as rapidly as the information could be furnished as to where funds should be sent.

My diary notes that on June 19, I prescribed Sam Browne belts for our officers.

On June 21 Dorothy Canfield breakfasted with me. We talked of earlier days in Lincoln, Neb., where her father was chancellor of the university and she my star pupil in mathematics, Dr. John Finley called that day.

Troops Arrive
Battalions of Yankees Reach France

Meanwhile the question of new quarters in Paris for myself and my personal staff was most satisfactorily settled through the kindness of Mr. Ogden Mills, who placed his residence at my disposal.

I went to St. Nazaire June 28 to meet the advance elements of the 1st Division and inspect the port.

The first section of the 1st Division convoy had brought to St. Nazaire the headquarters, the 16th Infantry, two battalions of the 28th Infantry, one battalion of the 5th Marines, and some motor transport troops and stevedores. To see the naval vessels and transports flying the American flag in the harbor gave us all a thrill of pride. It was a pleasure to meet the naval commander, Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, who was to have general charge of the convoy system.

The regiments of the division had all served under my command at one time or another. They were now, however, composed of a large percentage of recruits and would have to go through a long period of training. After a few days spent in the cantonment at St. Nazaire, the Infantry of the division was sent to the training area of Gondrecourt, north of Neufchateau, and the artillery to Valdahon, near Belfort.

Maj. Gen. William L. Sibert, who had won distinction as an engineer in the construction of the Panama Canal, was in command of the 1st Division.

The two Infantry brigades were commanded by Brig. Gens. R. L. Bullard and Omar Bundy, both of whom had many years of line service behind them. I had known all three of the generals officers, as we were cadets together at the Academy, although all belonged to classes ahead of mine.

I assembled the general officers and the regimental and battalion commanders who had arrived and gave them a brief outline of the Allied situation and explained the tentative plans for the training and employment of our troops. They were cautioned regarding the observance of censorship rules and were directed under no circumstances to permit the discussion of military affairs with people not in the service, or even within the army, particularly regarding the members and movements of troops, except officially.

It had been arranged that the regulations restricting reference to the Allied armies by the press should apply to the American forces. But to my utter surprise the French and British papers, in their eagerness to let their people know that the elements of the American Army had really reached France, carried full accounts of the arrival of this convoy, giving the port of debarkation, the designation of units and the number of men.

The publication of this piece of news was in open contravention of the censorship rules and called for immediate steps to prevent further infractions. My vigorous protest resulted in our placing in the French Press Bureau an American representative to whom all matter regarding our army was to be submitted for approval.

Gen. Bullard.

News Suppressed
Army Achievements Not Clearly Understood

The rules of censorship were prescribed in considerable detail, but they were not always wisely applied, as no two censors ever construed them alike. To be on the safe side, the censor often eliminated from press dispatches and personal correspondence information that was harmless, but in the main few errors were made. In the enforcement of the regulations it was a question of deciding between giving our anxious people at home facts which they had every right to know and the necessity of keeping the enemy in the dark regarding our numbers, plans and movements.

There is no doubt, however, that the suppression of news prevented our people from obtaining a clear and contemporaneous conception of the great and often brilliant achievements of our armies and left such knowledge to be gleaned from meagre accounts by participants or from the later writings of historians. It was unfortunate that such rules had to be enforced as otherwise much that might have been published at the time may never be known, but there was nothing else to be done without serious risk.

Decisions Made
Make Selection of Ports And Sector

Although we were generally committed to operate with or near the French, the selection of the actual front was largely dependent upon the ports and lines of communication available. It was therefore necessary to consider the different possibilities of the problem as a whole before making final decision. Every consideration dictated that our army should be in no sense in a subordinate relation.

It was finally decided we should use the ports of Bordeaux and St. Nazaire. It was likewise estimated that the railroads leading to the Lorraine sector, with collateral routes available, could be improved to meet our needs.

Then it became necessary to determine the sector where our forces, fighting as a unit, would be most effective. After lengthy study and consultation with Allied leaders, it was logical to conclude that from the purely military standpoint the employment of the American armies on the Lorraine front would prove the most beneficial. In conference with Gen. Petain, who had reached the same conclusion, the decision was made accordingly.

It was necessary to have a particular sector in mind to plan definitely and construct requisite rail and distributing facilities. It was tentatively understood between Gen. Petain and myself that the American sector should include the St. Mihiel salient. I suggested that the first American offensive would naturally be its reduction. He fully agreed.

First Encounter
Advantages Are Seen in Initial Success

The strategical advantages and the moral effect of an initial American success there were so evident that even then we entered into a more or less detailed discussion of the proposal. A few weeks later I

AUTO SHOW OPENING ON AIR TONIGHT

WE NOW PRESENT
By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Opening of the Pittsburgh Automobile Show, a special program to the Far North and the second act of "Lohengrin" as presented by the Chicago Civic Opera Company are on tonight's radio bill.

John S. Herron, president of City Council and Don Bestor's Orchestra are to officially welcome the Automobile Show in Motor Square Garden, WCAE at 8:30.

Bobby Mecker's Orchestra sends a program of cheer to the Eskimos, traders, trappers and Royal Mounted Police over KDKA at 11:15.

* * *

Speaking of the Far North we are reminded by Percy Boyd that the next mail from there arrives here in June.

* * *

Emma Revel plays the part of Elsa in KDKA's broadcast of "Lohengrin" at 10 p. m.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Who is Singing Sam of WTAM?

Betty.

Answer—Smiling Ed. McConnell.

* * *

"BY THE WAY——"

George Hicks of the Far West wears shell-rimmed glasses and resembles Harold Lloyd. NBC didn't take the "bad word" out of "Song of the Vagabonds" last night. Jessica Dragonette sang "Estrellita" very, very beautifully. It was the same song she sang for the Radio Show audience in Duquesne Garden. There are 60 pages of script in the average hour's play over radio. Henry Burbig spends his spare time hunting. Glenn Riggs puts the unusual in his standby announcements.

* * *

Bill Schudt, Jr., of the Columbia System, earned a rank in the development of television last night when he picked up W3XK from Washington, D. C., in his New York home.

* * *

Some handicaps to be overcome in television are immediately apparent when we tell you that W3XK used 20,000 watts to cover this short distance of 250 miles.

* * *

* * *

Facing was experienced. As we have said before, television will never be a success until the problem of static is solved.

* * *

The receiver Schudt used was a regenerative short wave set with two-stage audio amplifier and a scanning disk of 48 holes, a motor, a small magnifying glass, and a neon tube. The output was a 171A having 180 volts on the plate.

QUINBY LAUDS PERSHING

Memoirs of Gen. Pershing appearing daily in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph are being read with particular interest by the man who supervised the first headquarters telephone switchboard of the A. E. F. in Paris. He is William E. Quinby, assistant to the vice president and general manager of the Bell Telephone Company in Pittsburgh.

Lieut. Quinby

Mr. Quinby went over on the same ship with Pershing as a sergeant in the Signal Corps. He was chosen because of his knowledge of French and German and frequently acted as interpreter at headquarters.

In close touch with the tense atmosphere in the American high command during the early days of our participation in the war, Mr. Quinby says that Gen. Pershing was working under extreme pressure all the time. There were frequent conferences with French and English leaders in which friction appeared as Pershing held to his decision for an independent American army.

Today's Bluebird

"Blackbirds" were the rumors about this and that circulated in the A. E. F. The Sun-Telegraph will print one each day contributed by a reader, in connection with the publication of Gen. Pershing's memoirs. The best one submitted each day will receive a prize of one dollar.

"The favorite rumor in our outfit always centered around where we were going. Some buck would start it saying:

"'I passed the adjutant's tent and heard the commander say to him we were to be sent to Russia on direct orders from Gen. Pershing.' Or sometimes it was Italy. We never went."

It [illegible] more I believe, to keep in use the materials the orchidaus of [illegible] expression of endearment [illegible] Honey" than all the other sentimentalists of the republic combined.

I have often speculated on the activity of Hawaiian ensembles, Russian gypsy singers and brass bands were they deprived, respectively, by law, of "On the Beach at Waikiki", "Song of the Volga Boatmen" and "William Tell Overture."

No one since David Warfield, in my opinion, is as effective with a quivering voice as Helen Morgan.

It will ever be a matter of curiosity to me that, though America is the nursery of jazz, a German was first in the field with a jazz opera.

I have yet to hear a sketch of rural life in which a nasal twang was not the chief characteristic.

"The "Beautiful Blue Danube" never sounds upon the air that I am not filled with a vague longing to have known Vienna in the gay dasys before the war.

Of the present amorous ballad floating through the ether I am most partial to "Something to Remember You By."

I would walk a mile to hear Werrenrath sing "Rolling Down to Rio." I would not walk 10 feet to hear a coloratura soprano sing the Bird Song from "Pagliacci."

Though it contains all the fundamentals of modern jazz music, Debussy's "Golliwog's Cake Walk" has yet to assail my ears from a modern jazz band.

The boop-de-doop style of singing appeals to me most when it is offered by the originator, Helen Kane.

Easiest Way To Break Up a Cold

Millions Say of This Proved Way

Works Fast—Makes You Feel Like a New Person Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up, poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

WORLD SERIES GAME HERE IN 1887

HOW MANY WORLD series in baseball have been played partly in Pittsburgh? The record books put the number at four—1903, 1909, 1925 and 1927. But as a matter of fact, there have been five. They've overlooked one so far back that Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, was then actively playing the game as a first baseman, and is the only individual still having any connection with baseball who took part in that early post-season competition here.

C. A. Comiskey

The Pittsburgh club was not a participant in this particular title affair, but it was part of a world series just the same. It is recalled by the death of Hardie Richardson, 76, one of the most famous players of the old days. Richardson, like Comiskey, was one of the players in the local event. The contending teams were Detroit's National League pennant winners and the St. Louis Browns, champions of the American Association, then a major circuit, and their Pittsburgh world series meeting was staged at old Recreation Park in what is now the North Side on October 13, 1887.

THAT WAS THE most extended set of games ever played for the world championship, and it was also unique in that the rival clubs, instead of playing all the contests in their respective home cities went on tour, during which they visited nearly every town in the big loops. Fifteen games in all were put on, Detroit taking the title by winning 10 of them to the Browns' five.

Three games were played in St. Louis, two each in Detroit, New York and Philadelphia, and one each in Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, Boston, Baltimore, Washington and Chicago. On October 20 the teams played a game in Baltimore in the morning and another in Washington in the afternoon.

THE PITTSBURGH GAME was the fourth of the series and the first played outside the contending towns. Detroit won 8 to 0, Lady Baldwin pitching for the National Leaguers against Silver King. Richardson was in left field for the winners and led off in the batting order, with Ned Hanlon in center and Sam Thompson in right.

Charley Bennett was Detroit's catcher. Charley Ganzel was at first base in place of Dan Brouthers, who played in only the twelfth game of the series. Fred Dunlap was at second, Deacon White at third and Jim Rowe at shortstop.

COMISKEY, playing first base, was also manager of the Browns, who had just won the third of their four consecutive pennants, the only club except the New York Giants ever to capture four flags in a row. Bushong did the catching, with Robinson at second base. Latham at third, Gleason at shortstop and O'Neil, Welch and Foutz in the outfield. The umpires were Kelly and Gaffney. The Detroits of those days were one of the greatest slugging teams of all time. Richardson was a member of baseball's famous original Big Four on the club, the others being Brouthers, White and Rowe.

THOUGH IT HAD been rumored that there might be a shift this year to a backfield man in the person of Marchy Schwartz, Notre Dame, in electing Tommy Yarr captain of the 1931 football team, has adhered to its custom of choosing a line player as field leader.

Tommy Yarr

Yarr, who played brilliantly as regular center in his junior year last fall, entered Notre Dame from Chinacum prep school at Dabob, Wash. After he had spent a season with the third string in 1929 the center position was left open in 1930 by the graduation of Tim Moynihan and Joe Nash, and Yarr filled it with the fire and dash of his Dublin-born father balanced by the stolidity of his Cherokee Indian-blooded mother.

TWO YEARS AGO Knute Rockne got his wires crossed in making up Notre Dame's football schedule for 1929, and left out Carnegie Tech in spite of a contract that called for a game with the Plaid. A nice little act of sportsmanship by W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at Pitt, straightened out the tangle. He gave up his own game with the Irish so that the latter could give the Skibos a date.

In doing so, Don not only showed himself to be a real sportsman, but he gained something for the Panthers and for local fans, as Pitt's two-year contract with Notre Dame was extended to three years by Rockne, with the extra game going to the Stadium here.

WHEN NOTRE DAME'S schedule for 1931 was announced this week it showed evidence of another mix-up involving both Pitt and Carnegie. The Tartans' game with the Irish was O. K. for October 31 here, but the meeting of Pitt and Notre Dame in South Bend was published as being scheduled for November 7. As that is the date set for the annual Pitt-Carnegie tilt here, surface indications were that the Panthers would have to give up either their game with the Kilties or the one with the Rocknemen. Football men here were plenty worried for a time.

HOWEVER, it has all been explained and adjusted. From the Irish headquarters it is learned that in preparing the Notre Dame schedule for publication, somebody merely confused the University of Pittsburgh with the University of Pennsylvania and gave each of those teams the other's date.

It is Penn that will play in South Bend on November 7, and Pitt's correct date there is October 24, the date given to Penn in the public slate. That leaves the Panthers and Skibos free to tangle here on November 7. It's all straight now.

TOM HEENEY, veteran New Zealander, was the victim of a weird decision in his fight with Max Baer, making his second appearance in an Eastern ring, last night. While it is no trick to beat Heeney in the dying stages of his career, Tom was going strong last night when Baer knocked him out of the ring, and was resting up when he was counted out at eight—the time-keeper having momentarily forgot the two counts against him while he was out of the ring. Thus it was that the veteran fighter, having out-cuffed the California youngster in the two opening rounds, is charged today with a knockout defeat such as Victorio Campolo and Tuffy Griffiths hold over him, whereas he might have continued on to victory.

Primo Carnera

Baer should have stopped Heeney, and the result of a positive knockout would not have been surprising. Heeney's showing takes some pep from the rise of Baer, for Max unquestionably should have been able to "take" the almost-washed-up New Zealander. Jack Dempsey, the third man in the ring, found himself in the midst of a maize again. He was also referee the night Otto Von Porat and Phil Scott clashed for charity, and Scott went down in agony and crying "foul" from a punch to the hip.

IT IS DOUBTFUL if any amount of coaching between now and next fall could make Primo Carnera a good enough battler to beat the winner of the June bout between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling, whom he is scheduled to meet in September. That second match probably was booked just for show and gate purposes, and not because Carnera has done anything to merit such a title chance. But at least they're going to try to improve him, or to help the gate by giving the public the impression that he is being improved. To this end, Tommy Burns, former heavyweight champion, has been engaged to take Carnera in charge and to teach the man mountain all he can between now and the time of the fight. Burns has done a lot of fistic teaching and no doubt has ability in that line, but whether he will have much success with Carnera is questionable. Primo, besides being too big to be a great fighter, appears to lack some other fistic qualities which cannot be taught.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Although they have been able to add to their lead in the International League hockey race in recent engagements, the Buffalo Bisons are not particularly confident of success in their battle against the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets at Fort Erie, Ont., tonight.

The Bisons have downed the Jackets three times in as many attempts this season, but their last two duels were exceptionally close and hard-fought frays in which the locals had to get the "breaks" to gain the decision. Manager Mickey Roach and his men realize that the Steel City skaters are dangerous foemen, and they won't be particularly surprised if the "worm turns," and the visitors bag the triumph.

FIRST HALF ENDS

Tonight's game marks the close of the first half of the International loop race for the Jackets, and the beginning of the second half of the campaign for the locals. Buffalo has erased one game more from its schedule than has Pittsburgh.

Mickey McGuire, reserve center who has been out of the lineup for about two weeks with an attack of intestinal flu is to return to action tonight, Charles Reid, coach of the visitors, announced today. McGuire was able to play last Thursday, when the Jackets whitewashed Detroit, 5-0, but he was kept out of the lineup to make room for Whitey Fields, another center, who always appears at his best against the Olympics. Fields will not be in uniform tonight.

COX IN NETS

Reid handed out more bad news when he announced that Albie Cox, regarded as one of the best goalies in the circuit, will be back in the Pittsburgh nets. Cox, out for more than two weeks with a broken hand, signalized his return to the lineup by holding Detroit scoreless on Thursday. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Buffalo
Cox	G	Taugher
Fraser	D	Lederman
Berlett	D	Jackson
Quelette	C	Bogardis
Proudlock	W	Cahill
Gregg	W	Gest

Spares—Pittsburgh, Meinire, Rodden, White, McCurry, Melnire, Halliday, Reise, Smith; Buffalo, Lauder, Roth, Martin, Cain, Voss, Godin, Murray.

SCHOOLEY INSPECTS FARM

Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local hockey club, left last night on a trip to Niagara Falls, Fort Erie, Ont., and Syracuse. He will inspect Niagara Falls in the Canadian pro league, his hockey "farm," this afternoon, and this evening he will direct the Yellow Jackets in their fight with the Buffalo Bisons at Fort Erie. He will accompany his team to Syracuse for its battle with the Stars there tomorrow, and will return with the skaters when they come home to make ready for their duel with the Detroit Olympics at Duquesne Garden next Tuesday.

BUFFALO BEATEN

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 17.—Windsor's Bulldogs came through with a 3-to-2 triumph over the league-leading Buffalo Bisons here last night in an International League hockey tilt.

Duquesne Library Beats Uniontown 'Y'

The swimming team of Duquesne Library defeated Uniontown Y. M. C. A., 59-41, in the Duquesne Library pool last night.

Paul Wyatt, Olympic champion, defeated Mike Brady and Paul Skinner, of Duquesne, while Andrew Maraz, senior A. M. A. breast-stroke king, did well in an exhibition against Andy Swaney, Uniontown's senior outdoor champ.

The meet was featured by Choko's victory for Duquesne in the 200-yard event. Senago, of Duquesne, and Carney, of Uniontown, were second and third, respectively.

SPORT SHORTS

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Jan. 17.—Waynesburg College wrestlers repeated last year's season triumph over the matt team of Gettysburg College, taking a 26 to 10 decision here last night.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 17.—(AP.)—The Senate yesterday voted, 11 to 4, to pass the Senate bill to legalize boxing and wrestling in Delaware and creating a State Athletic Commission. The bill now goes to the House.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Vince Dundee, claimant of the English middleweight title, has been offered $10,000 for a match with Jack Hood, English fighter, in London. His manager, Max Waxman, said he had made a counter proposal to accept the match for $15,000.

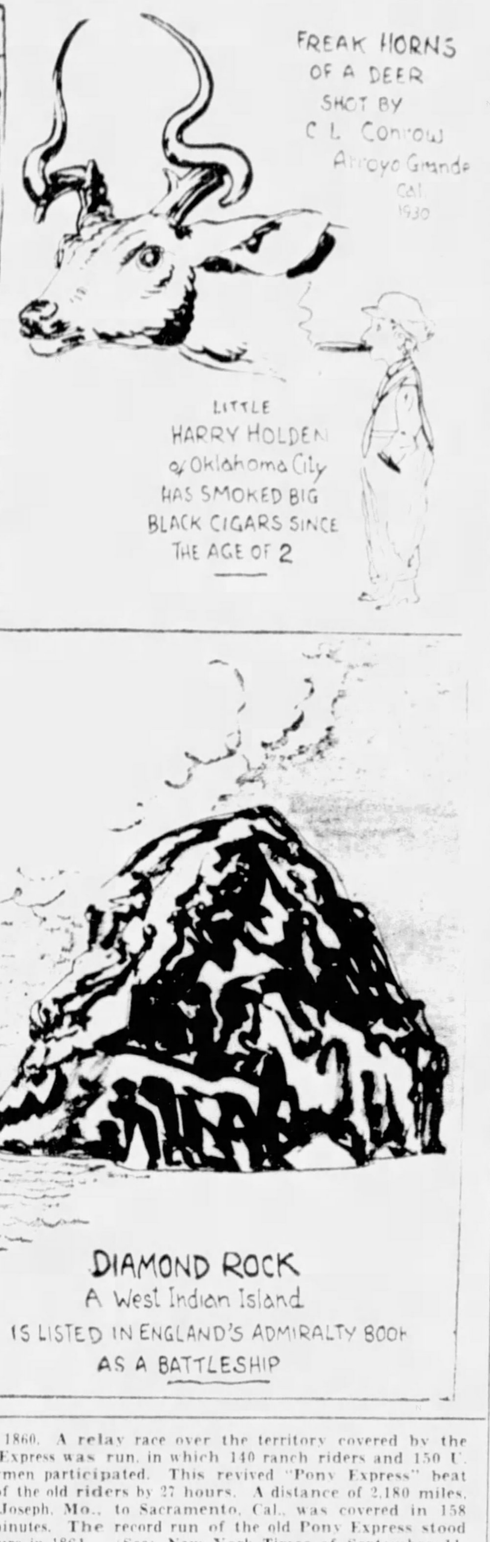
WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Golfers going south this winter can take their golf bags as baggage without extra cost. Southeastern carriers were granted permission by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to extend free baggage service to golfers.

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Jan. 17.—(AP.)—West Virginia Wesleyan defeated Marshall College here last night, 37 to 30. Wesleyan led at half time, 18 to 13.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Caspar Olmen, of Canton, S. D., will defend his national ski championship tomorrow on the Gary, Ill., slide, against the biggest field ever to enter the meet and including Germany's champion, Ludwig Boeck.

Believe It Or Not By RIPLEY

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Robert L. Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)



EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: MARONCELLI MEMORIZED ALL HIS OWN WORKS—Pietro Maroncelli (1795-1846) an Italian poet and patriot, was imprisoned for 10 years (1820-1830) by the Austrian authorities and confined in the redoubtable prison of Spielberg, Moravia. During his long stay in solitary confinement he composed both music and lengthy poems of great beauty. Having no paper or writing material, he was compelled to memorize his works, and, after his release, was able to reproduce them from memory for publication. (See: Silvio Pellico's "Mie Prigioni.") THE PONY EXPRESS—In September, 1923, an organization known as the "Pony Express Memorial Association" revived the "Pony Express" to commemorate the ever-memorable exploits of the hardy "Express" of 1860. A relay race over the territory covered by the old Pony Express was run, in which 140 ranch riders and 150 U. S. cavalrymen participated. This revived "Pony Express" beat the time of the old riders by 27 hours. A distance of 2,180 miles, from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Cal., was covered in 158 hours 8 minutes. The record run of the old Pony Express stood as 185 hours in 1861. (See: New York Times of September 11, 1923, page 27.) THE KISSING BUG—There is a kissing bug. It is classified as conorhinus sanguisugus of the family Reduviidae. Its length is about three-fourths of an inch, and it derives its name from its habit of attacking human lips. The "kiss" is painful, but not poisonous. (Reference: United States Division of Entomology, Vol. 22, of 1900.)

TOMORROW—THE PIRATE, YERMAK.

HEINIE MEINE REINSTATED

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Pitcher Heinie Meine, who left the Pirates in mid-season last year on account of ill health, is back in the fold and with his health restored.

The Pirate officers announced last night that Meine has been reinstated by Judge Landis, commissioner of baseball. The act, however, was just a formality, Meine was listed as voluntarily retired after he left the club.

Heinie recently underwent an operation for removal of his tonsils and he has shown steady improvement since that time.

The return of the St. Louis Dutchman gives the Bucos 14 pitchers, the staff as a whole shaping up with the best in the league.

CHASE VICTOR OVER DAY

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 17 (AP.)—Leo Chase, Buffalo, N. Y., outstroked Wm. Day, Chicago, sensational 15-year-old golfer, 1 up at the nineteenth hole to survive the second day's play in the Miami Biltmore golf tournament yesterday.

In other first flight matches, William Rupp, Buffalo, advanced to semi-finals by defeating Dick Bennett, St. Albans, N. Y., 2 and 1. T. E. Price, Miami, won an easy 5 and 4 match from Joseph Langner, New York.

J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., was forced to extend himself to win 1 up from Joe Rogh, Miami.

Bowen Recovering From Operation For Appendicitis

Pete Bowen, Pitt track star, has lost a race to appendicitis. Pete has been ill for some time, and hoped to finish this semester's work before going to a hospital. But Pete was stricken Thursday night and today is in St. Francis Hospital recovering from an operation.

COX CARDS 69, TAKES LEAD

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Wilfred H. (Wilfy) Cox, good-natured Brooklyn professional, leaped into the lead of the $25,000 Agua Caliente open golf tournament yesterday by unloosing a sensational 69 on the classy field for a three-round total of 218. He served notice he might dislodge John Golden from the temporary throne when he covered the first nine holes in 34.

His 69 not only gave him the lead for the first 54 holes, but established a new competitive record for the course.

Golden's best yesterday was 76, for a total of 219.

Ed Dudley also scored 76 to take third place, with 220, a place shared with Horton Smith, who had 73, and Clarence Clark, of Tulsa, Okla.

Gene Sarazen, last year's winner, could not better his second round score of 75 and stood at 222 with Mortie Dutra, George Von Elm and Ralph Guldahl.

Walter Hagen, the old master, furnished a sensational half round by galloping home in 34 strokes after he had used 39 going out. This left him with a total of 223, tied with Macdonald Smith, who slumped to 77.

HEENEY GETS WEIRD KAYO

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, in his modern role of referee, manages to get himself into more weird jams than he ever did as a fighter.

The Old Manassa Mauler was third man in the ring of Madison Square Garden last night when Tom Heeney was knocked from the ring in the third round of his scheduled 10-round match with Max Baer and then was counted out when he least expected it and least needed it.

Old Tom had cuffed the cocky California youngster around the ring in the first two rounds, charging in with both fists flying and generally making it embarrassing for Baer. The third round had barely got under way when the two battlers got themselves all tied up in a wrestling match along the ropes.

A few light punches sent Thomas off balance and he sailed through the ropes into the press box. Apparently unhurt, Tom clambered back into the ring and rested on one knee, all set to take a little time to get his bearings before resuming the struggle.

The knockdown timekeeper, Arthur Donovan, momentarily forgot he had counted two while Heeney was outside the ring, and counted up to eight. Then Donovan remembered, added eight and two and found they made 10, and waved Heeney from the ring.

There was nothing Dempsey could do. He was just as surprised as the 8,000 cash customers and Heeney at the queer ending of the bout in which the veteran New Zealander had put up a much better fight than anyone had expected him to. Baer weighed 201, Heeney 208.

Heeding a warning from the New York State Athletic Commission that suspended fighters and managers are not permitted in licensed boxing arenas, Garden officials had "spotters" posted to keep out, among others, Primo Carnera and Paulino Uzcudun, both of whom are under ban in this state.

Kojac, Olympic Champion, Sets Water Mark

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—George Kojac, Olympic champion, set a new National collegiate record of 2:14 2-5 in winning the 220-yard free style swim last night in a meet between Rutgers University and City College of New York. He slashed the old record of 2:17 3-5, set by Ray Ruddy, Columbia, at Harvard on March 28, 1930, by 3 1-5 seconds. The meet result was a draw.

Matches between Percy Siverd and McCook Reed and Frank McClintock and George Stocking loom as headliners.

Last week Reed defeated Siverd in five hard-fought games. Stocking, the only player who has been able to stop Reed, is likely to find McClintock a very dangerous foeman.

By JESS CARVER

The entire membership of the Big Four, this district's major collegiate athletic organization, freshmen and all is staging a one-day basketball convention in Pittsburgh today. Wash.-Jeff appears in the Tartan Gym tonight opposed to Carnegie Tech's formidables and West Virginia makes its annual invasion of the Stadium meeting there none other than the peppery Panthers.

Larry Plaster.

In preliminary tussles, the freshmen quintets of the rivals will clash, both prelims slated to begin at 6:45 o'clock, with the Tech and Wash-Jeff to go on at 8:30, half an hour after Pitt and West Virginia varsities tear into one another.

LOCALS FAVORED

Because they have made more impressive starts, the two home teams are favored to win whatever honors are to be had tonight. In the case of Carnegie, this is a bit unusual, for during the past few years the Skibos have not been members of what might be termed the elite of basketball in this section. This year, however, a different tale is being told for the Tartans have exhibited all the earmarks of being a real ball club in whipping Western Reserve twice, Lehigh and Thiel.

Wash-Jeff hasn't done so nobly. The Prexies have played three games and lost two of 'em, dropping their only college encounter Wednesday to Bethany and losing a pre-season game last Saturday to the Butler Paulists. They won over the Hill Top Y. M. C. A. team here the evening previous.

Pitt's record, despite the presence of three defeats, at the hands of Indiana, Western Reserve and Creighton, is more impressive than the one sported by the Mountaineers. Allegheny and West Virginia Wesleyan both have taken the measure of the 'eers, Marshall and Salem have been defeated.

MOUNTAINEERS BIG

West Virginia is in a position to present an all-football lineup in the Stadium tonight. The likely starting forwards, Sortet and Doyle, the center, Eddie Bartrug and Capt. Larry Plaster and Joe Dotson, at the guards, all are varsity grid men. The zone defense employed by Coach Francis X. (Marks the Spot) Stadsvold, is bound to bother the offense of the Panthers, especially if the Mountaineers elect to stay in their shell.

Capt. Plaster and Eddie Bartrug are veterans of high caliber. Plaster has been a dependable and consistent guard for three years under Stadsvold, and so far, has been the ace of the Mountaineer defense. Mayhap, he'll be trumped this night.

Coach Carlson plans to start the same lineup that heard the first whistle against Fordham Thursday, though Don Smith and Co-captain Eddie Baker may see more and quicker action than they did against the Rams. With Baker back on the squad, Pitt's reserve strength has been greatly improved.

CUBBON REPLACED

Young Sortet has replaced Eddie Cubbon at a forward, even though Cubbon was the high scorer of West Virginia's early games. Sortet is a better defensive player than Cubbon, and with the latter on the splinters, Coach Stadsvold has an ace scorer in reserve.

The new bleachers at the end of the Tech gym court will remain in place and likely will be filled again tonight. They were jammed for the Reserve game Wednesday.

The President starting lineup will be composed of Phil Hamilton and Joy at the forwards, Martin at center, Ken McNeil and Johnson at the guards. Opposing this array, Buzz Hogan will employ the regulars who have been going along in such even stride in Tech's games to date. Bob Smith, who walks like a sailor on leave, and Capt. George Nease (who doesn't like to be called Georgie Porgy) will go at the forwards, Ed Stentz will get the call over Spike Merten at center, and little Jimmy Leonard, the spark plug of the club, and either Red Fergus or Joe Bronson at the guards. Fergus would be a cinch to start if he had not twisted his ankle yesterday in practice. The injury may force him to the sidelines tonight.

Undisputed leadership of Section I of the City League by Westinghouse High Schools longest and most prolonged possession today as a result of a thrilling 36-to-24 triumph over South High yesterday afternoon.

The Silver Lakers, who hold the unique distinction of having defeated both the W. P. I. A. L. and state high school champs this year, Shaler and New Kensington, rose to the heights to down the stubborn and formidable South aggregation. It took a brave rally during the last three or two and one-half, to be exact, minutes of play, for Zahniser's charges to eke out the triumph. South, after trailing 13-11 at the half, rallied to pass the Westinghouse crew and appeared well on its way to a triumph when the barrage of field goals was set off.

South took time out with a three point lead but the rest apparently did Westinghouse more good than it did South, for with Babe Dye and Showboat Ware starting the plays and feeding in the attack, Westinghouse stepped out in front to win.

ALLDERDICE VICTOR

For South, Pete Mervosh and Walter Neidrick, starred with Mervosh playing a particularly brilliant game.

Other City League tussles wound up about as was expected. In Section I, Allderdice nosed out Connelley in a nip and tuck game by 26 to 25, and Fifth Avenue added further to the woes of Peabody by licking the East Enders, 32 to 22.

In Section II, South Hills remained in the running and half a game behind the leaders, Allegheny, by trouncing Al Walsh's Vocational quintet, 47 to 21. Oliver booted Carrick, 33 to 22, and Perry took over Langley, 43 to 18.

Washington, Latimer, Herron Hill, Fifth Avenue, South Hills and Carnegie came through to win in City Junior League contests.

W. P. I. A. L. tilting was also at its height yesterday. Scott High of North Braddock walloped East Pittsburgh, 54-11. Turtle Creek Union smothered Pitcairn, 88-8. Charleroi whipped Donora, 30-16. New Castle humiliated Evans City, 49-14. Duquesne nosed out Clairton, 26-25. Homestead copped from Elizabeth, 13-9. Ambridge bumped Bellevue, 28-15. McKees Rocks tripped Dormont, 30-23. Uniontown stopped Jeannette, 27-21, and Wilkinsburg beat Aspinwall, 25-22, in the more important games.

Parnassus set down Tarentum, 16-15; Arnold bowed to Springdale, 22-19; McKeesport beat Munhall, 24-23; Ben Avon won from Sewickley, 24-15; Avalon toppled Leetsdale, 21-18; Trafford was outclassed by Rankin, 22-4; Edgewood lost to Oakmont, 27-19, and Ford City defeated Dayton, 42-16.

Canonsburg knocked off Claysville, 38-23; Ellsworth beat East Bethlehem, 32-11; South Union trumped Carmichaels, 27-15; Dunbar lost to Bellevernon, 24-19; North Union topped German Township, 28-11, and Burgettstown was nosed out by Findley, 24-23.

SWISSVALE WINS

Carnegie lost a tough one to Stowe Township, 15-14; Connellsville easily stopped Latrobe, 17-5; Redstone defeated Point Marion, 28-11; Beaver bowed to Beaver Falls, 27-7, and New Brighton upset Freedom, 45-14.

Cecil defeated Hickory, 32-18; Swissvale won from Etna, 28-17; Oakdale lost to McDonald, 28-16; Washington tripped East Washington, 37-18; Monongahela barely won from California, 18-17, and Rochester beat Monaca, 23-18.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER VI.

Gold! The magic word of all the world. Gold, the lure of men, brave, bold and bad, since the world began. Gold. Gold! Gold! Bellow its discovery to the high heavens and men will come tumbling, ripping, tearing, growling toward the cry like wolves to a kill.

Tex Rickard.

Men go mad over night at the mere mention of a gold strike. They come but few times in a man's lifetime, these frenzied gold rushes. The discovery of gold in the bleak fastness of Alaska started a human wave rolling into the silent land and Tex Rickard was swept along in the black whirl.

He had just been appointed to the office of town marshal of Henrietta, Tex., a job that was fraught with danger and abuse, danger if a peace officer sought to tame a drink-crazed cowpuncher, abuse if he allowed these hard riding demons of the plains to run amuck without rebuke. Nine times out of 10 chastisement meant the draw and a battle to the death. It wasn't movie stuff, either. The western bad man wasn't petted, he was plugged and as soon as possible in those days.

GOLD STRIKE LURES TEX

The young marshal had just settled into the routine of his new office when from the far corner of the North American continent came that cry, GOLD, which made men walk right out of their characters and join the mad rush to the frozen North. "Gold." The word shrieked its way around the entire world and Tex Rickard, tossing in the tin badge of authority, join the caravan.

Tex Rickard was a born leader and he fitted into his part in the history of that historic rush just naturally and as naturally as if he had been selected for the role by David Belasco.

Tex Rickard never was cut out for the back line. His place was in the center of the circle with men looking to his quiet logic his advice.

He didn't know where he was going. Men of his type seldom had encountered the new kind of hardships that were to confront every Tom, Dick and Harry who plunged headlong into the frozen North. It was no place for kid gloves and toppers, yet some arrived so garbed. What cared they. There was gold, wasn't there? There was gold to be got for the digging and what mattered a man's raiment so long as he had a pair of hands.

A BORN CATTLE MAN

I imagine Rickard might have looked the comic opera gold digger when he set out for the great objective. He was no different from the rest save that he was a man who had grown up on ranchship.

He had been cattle-herding since he was 10 years old, at which time his father, a millwright, had died leaving Tex as the man head of a large family.

Having come from Kansas, Mo., with his folks as a 5-year-old child, he became a Texan from the ground up, the greatest advertisement Texas ever had, in fact. He talked Texas. He breathed it. He walked it and when they tacked "Tex" onto his name, he lived it until the very end.

From 10 up to the time he was 24, he was an out-and-out plainsman. He knew his cattle, the code of the wide open spaces. Somehow, he never did shake off that Texas life.

Even after he had amassed a fortune as a boxing promoter, there lurked within him a desire to do a gigantic thing in a cattle way. He didn't know just what, but he wanted to do it just the same.

EARLY MEMORIES

One of the stories that he told of himself was the herding of two great bands of cattle out of Texas across the plains and through the hills into Kansas.

"It was the largest drive of animals ever attempted in Texas and, save for the loss of a few calves that were run off by wolves, the herd arrived as was.

"I was only a kid at the time of that drive, but I did my man's work with the best of them. I wasn't a drinker and I minded my own business. I guess my only fault was the yen to gamble. Doggone, but I would gamble. I wouldn't give much for a man who wouldn't," Tex used to say.

A tragedy crept into the driving of that herd which Tex never forgot.

"Two men, a fellow named Kirby and another nicknamed The Tripper, had a row over a gal both were stuck on. They were the talk of the town. Two loons strving to glare each other out of the gal's life," Tex said in telling the story.

"One night, they got lickered up and began to fuss again. They had learned about women from this one gal. She was a darned pretty trick and I suppose any of us would have got excited about her. Well, they ran out of hot words in a saloon one night and pulled their gats. They stood off a few feet from each other and began to blaze away.

TEX'S DEATH WATCH

"Some feller hearin' the racket ran into the doorway to see what all the shootin' was for. He never found out. A stray bullet plunked him in the head and he dropped in his tracks. Kirby and the Tripper took it on the lam and we saw no more of them—for a spell at least.

"And the gal, the dear thing, ups and marries a guy in the town and leaves Kirby and Tripper as flat as you please.

"Well, you can imagine our surprise when we called for cattle men to help in the herding of that band from Texas into Kansas to find that Kirby and the Tripper had joined the rest of us.

"We kidded them about the gal and you would have thought they would have laughed themselves out of the argument. The gal was gone and they were holding the bag. No siree. They fought more and more.

"They turned in one night, ugly as two she-bears. In the stillness of the night there came a shot and a groan. A horse clattered off down the trail. Kirby had been shot through the middle. The Tripper had plugged him.

WOLVES BIT DUST

"Kirby was in a bad way. The boys knew of a doctor somewhere 20 miles or more away. They set out after him, leaving me alone with the wounded man.

"Kirby was dead, his head in my lap, a half hour after they were gone. Late that night I heard the howl of wolves. I got my rifle and then it became a game of hitting between every pair of green eyes I saw in the darkness.

"When the boys got back, they found me with the dead body and a few wolves, which had come too close to the muzzle of my gun."

Billy Jones Beats Nichols at Erie

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 17.—Billy Jones, Negro light-heavyweight from Philadelphia, overpowered Georgie Nichols, Buffalo southpaw, to gain a well-earned decision in a 10-round bout here last night. Jones weighed 171, Nichols 166.

Frankie Bojorski, Erie southpaw, gained the decision over Johnny Bedini, Rochester, N. Y., in the six-round semi-final. Bojorski weighed 132¼, Bedini 133.

KELLY DEFEATS YOUNG RUDY AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Lots of hard socking and rocking featured the weekly Moose Temple boxing card before a good-sized crowd last night, but the usual knockouts were missing. Good condition and ability to assimilate punishment stayed off more than one kayo.

In the 10-round windup, Jimmy Kelly, sidewheeler of the North Side, 146 pounds, outpunched Young Rudy, Charleroi veteran, 144½, in all but the fifth, sixth and ninth rounds.

Rudy took a bad beating in the opening round and it looked like an early finish for him. He was on a bicycle in the next round and didn't try to do much scoring until the third, and then his ambition was quickly cooled off when Kelly invited the attack and made him hold on with a raking fire to the body.

RUDY SLOWS DOWN

The fourth round was fought along the same lines, but in the fifth, Rudy gained confidence and repeatedly beat Jimmy to the punch by leading with his right for the jaw, the proper way to knock a southpaw off balance. He repeated in the sixth, but was hurt in the seventh, just when he was going along swimmingly and appeared to have a chance to come from behind and get into the running for the decision, and he spent the latter part of this session on the run.

Kelly also outpunched his opponent in the eighth, but Rudy outslugged him in the ninth, a good mixing round and Rudy's best of the fight. Kelly had more stuff in reserve and handily won the tenth round and the unanimous decision. There were no knockdowns in the battle.

BUTCH BEATS MAZZEO

Mose Butch, of Oakland, 122½, had to boxe more cautiously than usual to win over Pete Mazzeo, ransy Clevelander, 119, in the six-round semi-final, with Mazzeo subbing on short notice for Johnny Warner, of Clairton, who is ill. Mazzeo rocked Mose a couple of times with rights in the second round and commanded his respect thereafter. Mose scored a knockdown for a count of eight with a right-hand punch to the jaw in the fifth round to help him clinch the honors.

Hal Murray, of Harrisburg, 138½, a good rangy boxer with a corking right cross, dropped chunky Harry Fine, of the Hill, 136, twice and sent him reeling back under another right to the jaw in the opening round, but Fine jumped up immediately from both floorings and fought back with such gameness that at the finish the judges disagreed, Frank Hogan voting for a draw and Frank Brown for Murray. The referee of all bouts, Red Robinson, concurred with Brown. It was Murray's fight despite the fact that he was handicapped by blood from a cut on his left eye from the second round on. This was the only round won by Fine. Each was making his local debut.

McTIERNAN BOXES BRENT

Joey Spiegel, of Uniontown, 144½, handed Richard Greene, Negro, of Homestead, a bad beating throughout the six-round opener, but could not knock him out.

Ray Eberle did the announcing and Tommy Grant and A. C. Couch the timing. Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician. It was announced that Buck McTiernan and Billy Brent will box the main bout in the Moose ring next Friday night.

Between Rounds

Charles Belanger, the Canadian light heavyweight, has joined the "stable" of Ray Arvin, of Chicago. He has boxed most of the leaders in the division.

Following is the card of amateur bouts to be staged under the auspices of the Twenty-first Ward Athletic Association in Columbus Hall, North Side, tonight: Johnny Shepler vs. Gene Judge, Young Zeno vs. Bully Kemper, Eddie Hart vs. Anthony Zelli, Pat Powers vs. Billy Fenes, Larry Strydler vs. C. Ciletti, and Butch Jacobs vs. Curly Klaus.

Johnny Dunn, New Kensington featherweight, says the Motor Square Garden promoters need look no further than himself in their quest for a suitable opponent for Johnny Datto one week from next Tuesday night. He not only is ready to take on the Filipino, but also is more than willing. It will be recalled he was sought as a substitute for Jackie Rodgers against Datto last summer when one of the several attempts to bring the pair together failed.

Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, has been matched to box Joe Petta, of Monessen, in the main bout on the Bills-Tobin-Harold Martin card at McKeesport next Thursday night. Both Al Arthurs, who stopped Paul Rinsky there last Thursday, will be in the semi-final bouts, as will Bruce Wright and Ray Nicholas, one or a principal in the other card.

Ollie Bartlett, of Detroit, and Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, have been matched for the right round semi-final of the Garden's oval show.

If Tonsils Hurt Chances, Bucs Should Win

The Pirates think the reason they didn't finish higher in the National League race last season was because their tonsils were not so good. And if they're right, the boys point out, they should be one of the healthiest teams in the land this year.

Look who's had 'em out.

Pitchers Heinie Meine, just reinstated after quitting the game because of ill health; Erwin Brame, Andy Bednar, Charley Woods, Steve Swetonic, Catcher Hal Finney, Infielders Pie Traynor, George Grantham, Gus Suhr and Harry Geissberger, Outfielders Paul and Lloyd Waner.

LEAGUE CHAMPS AT CHARLEROI TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN

One of the favorites in the second-half race of the Allegheny County League, the Charleroi Merchants go after their second straight victory tonight when they entertain Fintex, winner of the first-half crown, on the Charleroi High School floor.

The Merchants got off to a flying start at Jeannette last Monday night when they defeated the Felders in the inaugural contest and another victory tonight over the league champs will enable Al Wildman's boys to enter a deadlock for first place.

Ellwood City, a big disappointment in the first half, appears to have struck its winning stride, having defeated Fintex and the Mieles in its first two games. This club is going to bear watching in the final half of the County League season.

The North Side Community House floor will be the scene of the West Penn League games tonight. St. Michael's playing the Ray Schneiders and Community House opposing the North Side Bucks.

Two games also are offered the followers of the County Amateur League, Rankin Christian Center playing at Hill Top, while Kingsley House invades Westinghouse Club.

Homestead goes after its second straight Inter-State Saxon League triumph at Salem, O.

The Wagner Institutional League has two games on its schedule, Irene Kaufmann Settlement House, first-half champion, playing at Coraopolis, while Sewickley entertains Trinity.

The schedule for the second half of the season in the Tri-County Basketball League was announced today as follows:

Jan. 20, Duquesne at Swissvale; Jan. 21, Swissvale at Wellsburg; Jan. 22, Wellsburg at Monessen; Jan. 24, Monongahela at Monessen; Jan. 27, Monessen at Swissvale; Monongahela at Duquesne; Jan. 28, Duquesne at Wellsburg; Jan. 29, Swissvale at Monongahela; Jan. 31, Wellsburg at Monessen; Feb. 3, Wellsburg at Swissvale; Monessen at Duquesne; Feb. 4, Monongahela at Wellsburg; Feb. 5, Monessen at Monongahela; Duquesne at Swissvale; Feb. 10, Monongahela at Swissvale; Wellsburg at Duquesne; Feb. 11, Monessen at Wellsburg; Feb. 12, Duquesne at Monongahela; Feb. 14, Swissvale at Monessen; Feb. 17, Swissvale at Duquesne.

LOCAL BOOTERS SET FOR TEST

By TOM BIRKS.

With the calling off of Panhandle League games, everything is in readiness for the big national challenge cup tie at the Bridgeville Speedway tomorrow, when the Cleveland Shamrocks, Ohio's crack soccer club, meets Morgan Western Pennsylvania's standard bearer for national honors.

Today, the Pierpoint aggregation hooks up with the Mesta Machine eleven. If the Pierpoints win both their remaining games they will tie with Clan Douglas for the Central League leadership, in which event a championship series must be played.

WILDER STARS FOR BLUFFMEN; 'GATORS LOSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—With Chick Davies' Duquesne passers working at their best, the Bluffites closed their three-game local invasion here last night by upsetting Georgetown, 32-28, in a game that was marked by a rally in the last two minutes to hand the visitors the bacon.

Dave Wilder replaced Capt. Brud Stephens, who was put out on personals, and when the score was 28-all and only two minutes to play, it was his long pot-shot and a field goal by Benedict, whose all-round play featured the contest, that decided the issue.

The Dukes hopped off to an early lead, running up a 6 to 0 count on a pair of free tosses by McGeever and two field goals by Abele and Benedict.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Too Much Faith and Trust Not Advisable

Ever listen in on Street Car Broadcast? Sure you do . . . if you have ears! Usually, you can't help yourself. Our American Voices being what they are. That's what happened to Clarice the other day. And what did she hear? Plenty—

It was all about George and the Little Woman and Love in a House Dress—and Clarice is snickering yet. Maybe you'll snicker too, when she tells you about it. But if you've ever fallen—or are falling—for a "line" like George's . . . the chances are you'll be "fit to be tied"!

Here's the story. Read it and pick your brickbats.

"Dear Sally:

"I get a great kick out of reading the problems in your column, but I never thought of writing to you until today. However, this is just too good to keep. And maybe, if I tell about it, it may help somebody.

Overhears Conversation

"I came home on the train, and two girls sat behind me. You know how people talk, so you can't help but hear them. Well, they did! And if you've ever been too tired to read, and just wanted to idle your time away, perhaps you can understand how it was that I heard so much conversation.

"Anyway, one of these girls was to be married soon, and the other had been married quite some time. The bride-to-be remarked that she'd just had a permanent. When she said that, the other one came out with this—

"'Oh, you will get over that, May, just as I did. You know as well as I do that I always prided myself on being well-dressed, manicured and waved. But George is such a darling. He says that he loves me more in ho'dress than he ever did in all my satin and curls. So you see there is no use for me to even bother. I don't even get a wave when we go out. George says that he loves me just the same. And it saves so much time and fuss. And, of course, it saves a lot of money, too.

Out With Employer

"'But still we do spend a lot on clothes. That is, George does. He says a business man has to be well-dressed, and he always looks grand. And I'm sure he's going to get somewhere, too. He has been staying down at the office evenings lately, and I guess his boss has taken a liking to him because every once in a while he comes home, puts on his tux and goes down town to dinner with him.

"'He hasn't had a raise yet, but I guess he will be getting one soon. He says they just go to dinner and talk over the business. I'm so glad that he is sensible. So few fellows are.'

"Then I got off—to meet my husband, who had come to drive me home in our little roadster, and I told him about it. And did we laugh!

"Gosh, Sally! 'What fools we mortals be!'

"Can't you just see what dear old George is putting over—spending loads of money on his own clothes and his running around, and that poor girl swallows it hook, line and sinker! Boy, what a 'raise' she's going to get some of these days!

"Sure he 'loves her in a housedress!' Why wouldn't he—so long as she stays parked, there is no expense to him and doesn't interfere with his whoopee? I'll bet they 'talk over the business!' Yeah! And then some! Tell me another!

"Believe me, if I was that girl I'd tell that big bozo where to get off. And my advice to her would be to wake up and look alive and try and figure out where she's going. She's certainly heading for grief now, if I know anything about this old world.

Headed for Trouble

"Of course, if she did start out to spend money on manicures and clothes all of a sudden, George would probably buck like a bronco. Why shouldn't he, when he's been getting away with such a grand graft? But if she doesn't, I can certainly see her on the skids, and I don't mean maybe! There are too many pretty women just waiting for the likes of George.

"That's my view, and I have been happily married to my husband for five years now . . . and expect to be happily married many more. But isn't it funny what some folks will let themselves unsuspectingly swallow? It certainly give me a laugh!

"CLARICE."

Well, it sometimes gives me one, too, Sister. But laugh or no laugh, it's quite likely that this young lady is headed for plenty trouble.

Faith and trust are fine and noble things . . . so long as we use 'em with sense . . . which she obviously isn't. But we've got to keep track of our own marbles in this world if we want to keep them. We can't depend upon the good nature of other folks to save 'em for us. They're busy looking out for Number One themselves.

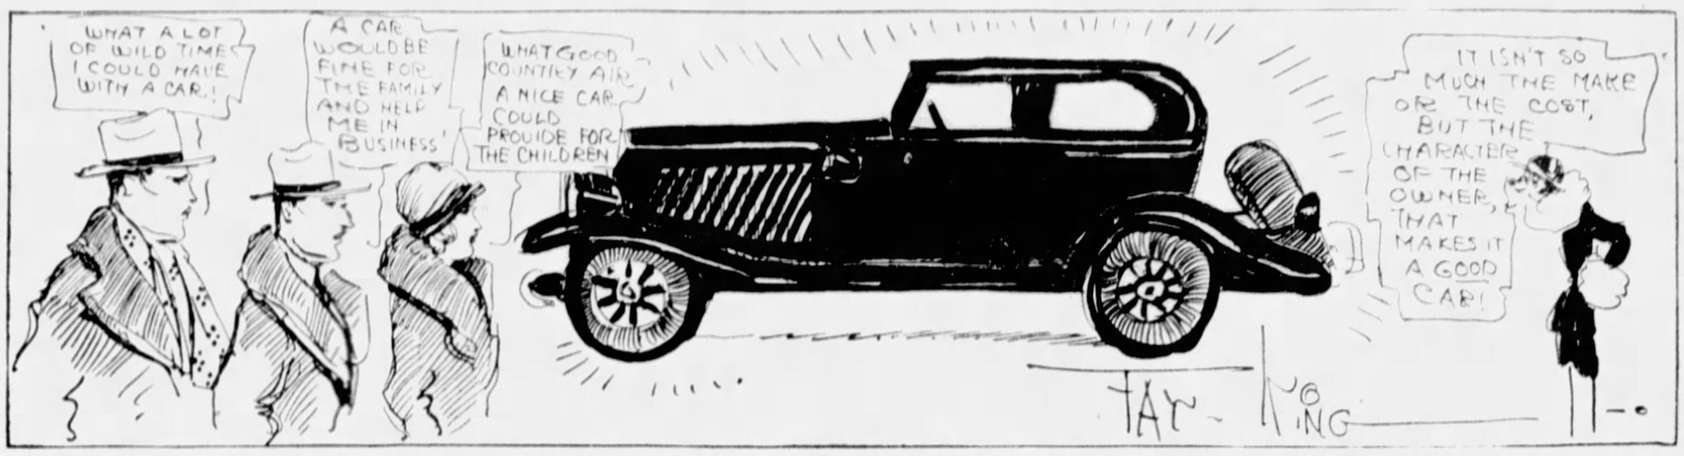
An Automobile Is Only as Good as Its Owner, Is Fay King's View



By FAY KING

The most modest car in price and size, and the most elaborate and costly one are equals when displayed all bright and new.

The real test as to which is the "best" car will depend upon the purchaser, for any car is only as good as its owner.

The finest car in the world that is owned by an unscrupulous man and used for evil purposes is not a "good car."

The happiness, the pleasure, the advantage that any kind of a car can be in the hands of a person of character, consideration and honest endeavor is an opportunity for comfort and content in travel millionaires and kings could not enjoy before the era of the automobile. Own a "good car."

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Call by Veritzen Places Madge in Embarrassing Position

The first ting of my alarm clock awakened me from a fantastic dream of hurrying Noel through a maze of boxwood such as one finds in old English gardens, while somewhere behind us the boy's father trailed our footsteps relentlessly. Mechanically I snatched the clock and thrust it beneath my pillow, that Dicky in the room adjoining, nor Mary in the bed across from mine, might not be wakened. I waited until Mary's undisturbed breathing and Dicky's silence—he always calls out when awakened by any noise in my room—told me that they were safely asleep. Then I slipped out of bed, and taking my clothing with me, went down the hall to the bathroom that I might not have to turn on the light and disturb Mary. I was so sleepy that I could hardly find my way, but my favorite tonic, a hot shower followed by an ice-cold one, effectually wakened me, and I switched on my tiny coffee percolator before I dressed, knowing that the hotel dining room would not be opened for a full hour.

I had time for a glass of grape fruit juice and a cup of black coffee before the time I had set for myself to be stationed at our apartment door. I knew the hour of the arrival of the first morning train from Sag Harbor which I was sure Philip Veritzen would meet in the hope of seeing his son, and I was also sure, that, failing to see him, he would come directly back to us at the hotel and demand that he talk to Noel.

Ten minutes after the train's arrival I took up a position just inside our outside door upon which I had set the latch, and which I held ajar ever so lightly that I might have a clear view of the corridor.

I had not long to wait. Soon Philip Veritzen's unmistakable tread came down the main corridor from the elevator. Firm measured footsteps they were, giving one the distinct impression that the man making them was a stately and impressive figure.

The impression was justified I told myself, as my employer came into view, and I softly closed my door. Even that fleeting glimpse had told me that, despite the mental strain under which he was laboring, not a hair of his head nor a detail of his costume was out of place, and that, to all appearances his was a personality to command, not to beg as I was sure he planned to do if he could get hold of Noel no other way.

I waited only until I thought he had reached the door of the Underwood suite when I opened mine and stepped out into the corridor, recoiling in what I flattered myself was well-simulated confusion.

"Oh! good morning, Mr. Veritzen," I stammered, added mendaciously: "I am looking for the morning papers, but I fancy they are not in yet. What time is it anyway? My watch needs repairing, I fear."

Mr. Veritzen gravely consulted his own timepiece.

"Six-thirty-three," he said, as he lifted his eyes and gazed steadily at me. How much he believed of my statement concerning the papers, I could not tell, but I had the impression that he had his own opinion as to my early appearance, and that it was one of clarity concerning my mental processes.

"I was going to knock at the Underwoods' door," he said after a second or two, "but your opportune appearance may make it unnecessary for me to disturb them. May I come in a minute?"

I hesitated, for what Dicky's reaction to so early and unconventional a call would be should he waken, I hated to think. There seemed no other way out, however, for I surely did not wish to be seen by any passing hotel employee in conversation with Mr. Veritzen in the hotel corridor at this hour of the morning, and I threw open the door behind me.

"Of course," I said, smiling, as I ushered him into the sitting room and drew forward a chair for him. "But I must ask you to excuse me for just a minute. I shall be back directly."

I went out of the room swiftly, closing the door after me, and hurried into Dicky's room. For I had swiftly decided that Dicky must know of this call now, and that he must come into the room in time to escort Mr. Veritzen into the corridor when his call should be finished. But I infinitely hated to awaken him, for like most men his temper is uncertain, or—rather—most fiendishly certain when he is first awakened from a sound sleep.

"Dicky!" I whispered gently shaking him, for I did not wish my voice to be heard outside the room. "Dicky, wake up!"

He opened his eyes and fairly glared at me.

"What the——" he began, shot a glance at the open window. "Why! it's hardly light yet! What's the big idea?"

"Please don't speak above a whisper," I pleaded. "I wouldn't have him hear you for worlds."

"Him? Who?"

"Mr. Veritzen."

Dicky sat straight up in bed.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

In the sitting room, I opened the door to look for the papers, and saw him just about to knock at the Underwood door. When he saw me, he asked to come in here."

Dicky's eyebrows narrowed into a frown.

"It's like his condemned nerve," he said. Still, he's probably justified in thinking the newspaper excuse as fishy as it looks to me. You've been honing to play the role of Missus Fixit ever since old Phil sailed away, leaving Noel and Mary marooned on the rocks. But why stall about it? And why, in heaven's name wake me up to tell me about it?"

Wise Words

Every man rejoices twice when he has a partner of his joy.—Taylor.

There is an art of reading, as well as an art of thinking and an art of writing.—Disraeli

No sadder proof can be given by a man of his own littleness than disbelief in great men.—Carlyle.

Expel avarice, the mother of all wickedness, who, always thirsty for more, opens wide her jaws for gold.—Claudianus.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

For Schoolgirls

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are two school girls coming to you for advice with problems that have been bothering us a great deal.

1. Is it proper, when walking to school in a group, for one girl to say, "Do you mind if I talk to B?"

2. Is it polite for A to talk about a party she is going to have when only one is invited out of the group?

E. AND E.

1. No, this isn't good form or good taste, for it just isn't kind to the other members of the group. This is a good question that you ask, for I have seen many girls do just this thing, and have thought how essentially ill-mannered they were.

If girls are in a group they should have manners that are appropriate for a group. There will be many other times when two girls of the group may talk together alone.

2. No. This is distinctly "mean-ie"—don't you think so? It can't help embarrassing the other girls, and anyone that does this is not polite.

The Purchasing of a Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

"A" says that when a young man is "keeping company" with a young girl he pays for everything, such as gifts, if the girl is invited to a party of one of his friends and a gift is required.

"B" says that if a gift is required and that the friend for whom the gift is required is her friend, the young lady should buy it, and that the young man should have nothing to do with it.

Will you please settle this argument for us?

READERS.

The girl should pay for such gifts, and should make definite discrimination as to what she allows this friend to pay for. If she buys this gift for her friend it is a gift; if the young man friend pays for the gift that the girl is to send—well, I should call it graft! Wouldn't you?

Tomato Juice Cocktails

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When tomato juice is served in a tall glass as a sort of cocktail before the dinner, is it correct to drink it?

2. When an ice or sherbet is served with the meat course of a dinner is it correct to eat it with the dinner fork or with the little spoon that is sometimes served with it?

3. Is it good taste to have hand-written calling cards?

L. W.

1. Yes. Usually a piece of lemon is served on the side of the under glass or under the container with the glass, and after you have squeezed some of the lemon in the cocktail, if you wish, and have perhaps added some salt, if you wish, you drink the cocktail.

2. It is better to use the spoon that is usually served with the sherbet.

3. No. Unless we can have properly engraved visiting cards it is better not to have any. And really, you know, visiting cards are not as expensive as we often think that they look! For the first engraving we have to have a plate made, of course, but the cards engraved from this plate are inexpensive, one or two cents apiece, and we can use the plate many times.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Protect Child From Exposure to Measles

Measles is essentially a disease of childhood and is rarely seen in adults. It is highly contagious, but unfortunately is usually accepted as one of the diseases that children "must contract." There is no basis for this belief.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is seldom fatal to children over 5 years of age. If at the time of the attack the health of the child is good the course of the disease is usually mild. However, in younger children, if they are physically defective or undernourished, the disease is extremely serious. It is very fatal to old people.

Measles usually begins with a severe cold in the head. The eyes are red and extremely sensitive to light. About the fourth or fifth day a rash appears behind the ears and about the neck.

The rash rapidly spreads over the face and body. It lasts about five days and is followed by peeling of the skin—a process which continues for about a week.

Since the disease is extremely serious for young children, it is important that we prevent the exposure of young children to measles. All cases of measles or suspected measles should be isolated at once. Children should not be allowed to sleep with or play with others who are even suspected of having measles.

This disease is contagious from the time the first symptoms develop until a week after the rash disappears. To prevent the spread of this disease, precautions must be taken at the onset of the very first symptoms. To do this properly all persons who have been exposed to measles should be kept under observation. All exposed children, unless they are known to have had measles, should not be permitted to attend school or to play with other children.

It is only with the wholehearted support and co-operation of the public that this disease can be prevented. Sometimes a mother is reluctant to keep Johnny at home because sister has measles. Usually Johnny goes to school ignorant that he has measles and spreads it among the other children.

Carelessness may cause the exposure of a very young child who subsequently becomes seriously ill. It must be remembered that this disease is extremely fatal to infants and young children. That is why the child should be guarded against exposure.

Above all, measles must not be considered as a natural event in children's lives. It must not be accepted as one of the diseases that children "must get."

Answers to Health Queries

A. B. Q.—Is there any connection between the nose and the heart—that is if one cannot breathe through the left nostril, would it in any way affect the heart action or any other part of the body?

A.—Improper breatning or insufficient oxygen naturally affects the entire system. If the left nostril is clogged it naturally makes for more difficult breathing which may or may not have further results, depending upon the conditions underlying the case. Have the nose properly examined and attended to.

* * *

D. M. Q.—What treatment do you advise for intestinal worms?

A.—Consult your doctor.

* * *

T. W. Q.—Will the drinking of water if done to excess affect the nerves or be injurious for hardening of the arteries?

A.—No, it is almost impossible to drink too much water. The habit of drinking copiously of water between meals is most beneficial for the body and system in general.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Married to a man she never loved, and for the six years of their married life never having lived in the same house with him, a very much concerned lady writes to ask me what to do.

The first two years of their married life he gave her some reason for not wanting to announce the wedding. She agreed. After two years he said he had to educate his brother. What that had to do with his announcing that he was married I can't see. Evidently she saw it because she agreed again.

In February the brother's education will be finished and she is wondering what the next excuse will be. I'm wondering, too. But what is puzzling me still more, is why she doesn't announce it herself whether he likes it or not? Surely a man married to a woman hasn't the right to make her keep silence for six years and more. If he has I wish he would tell me on what grounds. If she does keep still, probably to be talked about, though they both live at home with their respective parents, I'd like to know why she does it.

In six years, the lady tells me, her husband has spent possibly $300 on her. That was for an appendicitis operation.

My smile she will have to pardon, when I read this: "He visits me in the evening, sits and reads for a while and then falls asleep."

They ARE married all right. She can't interest him enough to keep him awake, and she doesn't love him enough not to care if he falls asleep! And won't that make a million wives smile understandingly!

"Sometimes," she writes, "the thought of the future overwhelms me and I think that I'll lose my mind."

You aren't the only one that feels that way, married or single, secretly married or quarreling in the back yards before the neighbors.

But hear her tell me: "I could unload him via the divorce court, but he is such a sympathetic simp. I am putting my own feelings behind me because I am of a very sunny disposition and can hide my feelings behind a big smile. I am sure if I did divorce him it would ruin his health. Then I wouldn't be happy knowing that I had deliberately hurt him, so all I can see ahead is a loveless life, try as I may to kid myself to the contrary."

That woman is in love, but doesn't know it. They both need a jolt. She would feel terrible and he would feel terrible if they get divorced! What they need is a vacation from each other to find out how great is their need of each other. He better stay away instead of going to sleep, and she better mix with other people and make him step around to hang on to her. I don't mean flirt. I mean have a good time and forget him. He will come trotting along with a box of candy before many days have passed.

Being bored is terrible. You are so used to each other that you each know the answer coming no matter what question either of you ask. You can't remain interesting staying at home brooding. Nobody else ever did it. Get out if you can't do anything more. Go to a movie or stroll through the stores—watch other married people. That will give you many a laugh, and something to talk about to keep him awake.

(If I'm wrong, write me, care Universal Service, 63 Park Row, New York City.)

Household Hints

When vegetables are dark in color they have been cooked too long.

Don't hesitate to ask the artist who painted your portrait where it should be hung and how to light it.

When hats are being rejuvenated keep in mind that the ribbons can be given a fresh appearance by dipping them in a quart of water, in which three tablespoons of sugar have been thoroughly dissolved.

It is a wise mother who early develops in her child pride in his personal belongings. Let him have his own tiny set of toilet articles. This is not only sanitary but it is a good way to instill in him the importance of being careful of these articles.

Muslin and net curtains wear much longer if they are not permitted to become too soiled. Dirt not only has a deteriorating effect but is more difficult to remove when it has become ingrained in the fabric. An excellent method of washing these dainty articles is: First let them steep in cold water for an hour or so. Make a lather of dissolved soap and hot water, squeeze and knead. Rinse well in warm water. Fold and pass through the wringer. Iron lightly the way of the selvage and on the wrong side.

Horoscopes

Sunday, January 18

Sunday's horoscope holds promise of lively conditions for those engaged in literary or cultural pursuits, but is hazardous for those in the employment of others. Domestic, social or romantic affiliations may have some conspicuous or entirely unexpected denouements, which should be pleasant although holding some slight sorrow or disappointments. Be on your guard against small treacheries.

Those whose birthday it is, if engaged in literary, legal or cultural pursuits, may look for a prosperous year, but if in the employment of others it may not be propitious. Safeguard the work and look out for petty treacheries. Purely personal relations are likely to take on a spectacular or unforeseen aspect, happy but precipitate.

A child born on this day may be versatile and capable, but may do better on its own score than in employment. It may have many gracious social qualities making for its popularity and advancement, but its personal career may be adventurous or sensational.

Monday, January 19

Monday's astrological forecast shows the fiery planet Mars holding conspicuous position, indicative of aggressive tendencies with decisive moves in the attainment of the ambitious, even to the extent of precipitating reckless and impetuous actions and ill-guarded and perilous words. Change seems imminent in this connection, with probable travel or new environment as well as new interests.

Those whose birthday it is may plan for a very lively year in which they will be keyed up to aggressive action and bold initiative. Perhaps to a degree of headlong an tumultuous conduct which may bring rebuff. With care, there are excellent openings to take advantage of, with change, travel, new affiliations of a constructive and profitable nature.

A child born on this day should be quick, clever, indomitable, aggressive, but also tumultuous and probably quarrelsome in the endeavor to attain its ends. It may lean toward engineering, machinery or the army, which may take it on far travels from its homeland.

Montana Woman Lost 17 Pounds Weight In 4 Weeks

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer, of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

When stout women can lose fat and at the same time gain in energy and vigor.

Gain in charm and vivaciousness.

Gain a healthy complexion and have eyes that sparkle with buoyant health.

And at insignificant cost—isn't it time to use common sense?

Please read this letter carefully:

"Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

"I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give 'Kruschen Salts' a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs., and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better.

"May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. Just try one bottle and by following directions, I am sure it will convince any one. I bought my second bottle today."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at any drug store in America.

Why not try one bottle—if not joyfully satisfied — money back. When taking Kruschen you can reduce more swiftly by cutting out pastry and fatty meat—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—it's the safe way to reduce.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

An excellent dandruff remover is made by combining one ounce each of castor oil and alcohol. Apply to the scalp with a medicine dropper the night before the shampoo and friction briskly.

Color sense, developed to such a degree that lovely hues make almost an emotional plea, is a help to a woman who would dress beautifully—and what woman would not? She who is a good judge of fabrics has an advantage. She selects those materials that have an appearance of friendliness and richness. The femme bereft of color sense will invariably select some cold, austere, touch-me-not color for her new frock.

Girls with skins that are blue-white should drink quantities of milk, which is a blood maker. These little wan-faced lassies are usually suffering from malnutrition or anaemia. A healthy skin is of ivory tone, the ivory-pinkness of the tea rose. The blue-white skin seldom freckles or tans. It is significant of physical impairment and those who have it should be hustled to the old family doc for a medical examination.

Thin, scrawny girls should fatten. They will look better and feel better with more avoirdupois. They need eggs, milk and cereals, and shouldn't be stingy with the butter when they spread it on their bread. There must be had plenty of sleep, nine hours if possible.

The white-haired sister with youthful face is enhanced by delicate, carefully applied make-up. Rouge should be of coral if her eyes are blue and a faint damask if eyes are dark. The lipstick need not match the cheek coloring, but should be of a tone that is harmonious. Flesh-colored powder appears to better advantage with silvered locks than rachelle.

Lung capacity means good complexion, bright eyes, quick step and an ambitious nature. The air-starved girl is never a live wire; her skin is pallid and of poor texture. Lungs need ventilating half a dozen times a day, a drawing of the air into the lower cells. Place the flattened palms on the chest, breathe deeply and watch the hands lift. Exercise is a beautifier, but most women aren't interested in getting their beauty by that method.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert, rich society girl, shares her home and fortune with her newly found half-sister, Kitty, whom she discovers living in poverty. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance with whom she had broken her engagement when she learned he was a fortune hunter. She now fears for Kitty and calls upon Duke Garson, Kitty's underworld friend, to use his influence. Duke refuses to interfere. He tells Connie he is interested in her. Connie, fascinated by Duke, is disappointed to learn he is an adviser to the underworld. She sees him talking to Higgins, the butler. Later, Duke explains that Higgins informed him of her mother's carelessness with her pearls. Connie realizes she loves Duke. Kitty and Jim announce their engagement. Connie assures Duke his vocation makes no difference to her. He tells her that she might change his whole life. Jim tells a story of being held up and robbed, but Duke doubts him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXV

Connie's eyes widened with amazement at Duke Garson's surprising statement.

"Do you mean Jim lied about being held up?"

"Yes, that's exactly what I mean. The story he told us isn't important—but I wonder what was his motive in telling it. Why should he want to come back and spend the night here?"

"Oh, I hadn't thought of that. I was so taken up with the thought that Jim had been held up and robbed that I didn't stop to think of anything else. Why, I suppose he wanted to see Kitty. But that's ridiculous. He could have seen her any time during the day. He—"

Observed Auto

"Three miles to go," he said. "I'll tell you something. You probably have noticed a car that has been following us. I saw him when he drove up behind us at the garage. I stopped just outside the village and watched him pass me. The only lights I saw were the tail lights, and I followed him down the road for a number of miles. There must be a cabin or some other place around that way."

"There is a cabin," Connie said. "Jim and Kitty went there last night."

"So I imagined. I was surprised when I happened that I was right behind them when they turned in at the cabin. I stopped down a little distance and crept back this way. I wondered at the time if he had forgotten something and returned, but it seemed to have pulled up on the road and turned out the lights."

Denies Admiration

Duke Garson made no response to Connie's remark. He appeared to be looking straight ahead through the windshield, but Connie felt that his attention was centered on her.

"You guess is as good as mine. Anything is possible. Who shall say what idiotic motives move a man when he is in love?"

But it was not THAT much in love with Kitty, Connie protested. Actually, I don't think he is half as crazy about her as she is about him. I don't think, really, he is capable of any such romantic urge as to fix up such a ridiculous story just so he could spend the night under the same roof with her. That requires a certain amount of a certain kind of imagination—that he doesn't have. I simply don't know what to think."

He is capable of more than you suspect," Garson hazarded.

You don't like him, do you?"

Why do you ask me that?"

I don't know—I sort of felt it."

"You can hardly expect me to think well of a man who tried to marry you until you found out his character—and who then immediately turned to another girl—your sister—because, as you imagine, he is attracted by her money. I shouldn't think you'd admire him a great deal yourself."

I don't admire him at all—but I suppose it's just that I'm used to him," Connie said, hesitantly. After all, he is my cousin, and I did think him quite nice. He saved my life, you know."

Duke Frightened

"Jokes? If you only knew how far I was from joking. Can't you see that I'm frightened to death?"

Frightened?" Her eyebrows lifted.

Yes, frightened, terror-stricken, panicked. You have me bluffed clean against the wall. I'm afraid to death of you. I've been sitting here hanging on, hoping to get the nerve to tell you how I feel. . . . you're so lovely . . . so wonderful . . ."

His voice broke and stopped with a heavy emotional silence, as tense as the instant of impending lightning.

Youthful Pajamas

Pattern 2044

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By Anne Adams.

Even the tiniest girls wear pajamas these days, and justly so, since their warmth and service far exceed the nighties of old. The little garment sketched borrows in details from a grown-up model, the cleverly cut neck and the belted blouse; the blouse may, of course, be worn inside the trousers. Sleeves may be made long or short, or may be omitted entirely.

Pattern 2044 will wear and launder well if made of flannel, batiste, percale or cotton broadcloth. You will find a delightful choice of suitable prints for youngsters. The dog is part of transfer pattern 704 which also includes a bunny to be made of toweling and stuffed. Price Fifteen Cents.

May be obtained only in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 4 requires 2⅞ yards of 36-inch fabric.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

DAILY TRUE STORY — Inside Stuff

Pete Dorgan, New York STAR-TIMES correspondent, sprawled in the Florida sun meditating on the dumbness of editors in general. The editor of the STAR-TIMES in particular.

Only a week ago Pete had written a complete explanation of the situation. John D. Bigman, 90 year old millionaire came to his winter home each season with the idea of resting. He would grant no interviews whatever to anyone and he carefully guarded against any undue publicity. It was final. Pete had explained it, yet here was a wire from his paper "Get J. D. Bigman party." To add insult to injury there had come a terse letter advising him to watch out for a correspondent from the PRESS-HERALD, a rival sheet that boasted it's ability to get "scoop" news.

"It's enough to make a guy mad," complained Pete to Nick Fitz, the news camera man who did society shots.

"Yeah," agreed Fitz, helping himself to one of Pete's cigarets. "It's tough." He scratched a match. "Yes, sir—it's certainly tough to be the world's richest man."

"What's he want to give a party for anyhow?" Pete demanded grumpily.

It would be a very simple affair, according to the mayor of the exclusive little resort town, who had been a guest on previous occasions. There would be refreshments and some form of entertainment, usually a quartet or soloist and the party would be over by 10 o'clock. It would be easy enough to write the usual hunk story but Pete had a stubborn hankering for some inside stuff. Something no one else had.

Guests Arrive

The day of the party was a credit to the state. Warm and balmy, with everyone headed for the golf links. Pete arrayed in white linen suit and sporty straw hat, nonchalantly sauntered after them, deciding that he would trail Mr. Bigman and his friends while they played in hope of picking up a little feature story. Mr. Bigman was very proud of his golf game and rarely missed a morning on the links. Pete had followed his eight-hole play around on several occasions and Mr. Bigman had voiced no objections to his presence as long as he observed a reasonable distance from the green or tee and did not try to enter into any prolonged conversation with him.

That night, with the party still on his mind, Pete meandered over to the Bigman place to see what was going on. The house was fairly close to the road and the long casement windows gave a very good view of the living room.

Several people drove up in cars and one or two came walking down the road. They simply went up the walk to the front entrance, knocked on the big brass knocker and were admitted by Mr. Bigman's butler.

The longer Pete stood there the more he craved to get inside. There were thirty or so persons seated in the comfortably unpretentious living room, and by standing on tip toe, Pete could catch a glimpse of Mr. Bigman visiting with his guests.

Undecided just what to do about it, Pete was fishing for a cigaret when a young girl carrying a violin, came down the road and turned swiftly up the walk that led to the side entrance.

Quickly Pete caught up with her. "O, are you late too," he smiled disarmingly.

She nodded, quite breathless with hurrying. "Yes, isn't it awful. I don't know whether I dare go in or not."

"O, lets," he urged. "We can't stand out here."

Beautiful Girl

She laughed, a very charming little laugh. "Then we won't knock."

Together they cautiously pushed open the door and stepped into the hall. There was no one in sight.

"I'm going in the other door," whispered the girl, and with a swish of blue chiffon and a twinkle of silver slippers she was gone.

Pete looked disconsolately down at his wrinkled linen suit. If he'd only had on evening clothes.

But the chances were that he would be thrown out anyway he reminded himself, and moved over to the heavy velvet draperies that curtained the doorway of the living room.

The girl in the blue dress was playing her violin and the guests were listening in attentive silence. She bowed before an appreciative patter of applause. Pete's eyes gleamed with interest. He wanted to meet that girl. She was clever as well as pretty and Pete liked that combination.

His admiration was rudely interrupted by an authorative tap on the shoulder.

The butler was plainly surprised to find him there.

"What are you doing here?" he eyed Pete suspiciously.

"What does it look as if I were doing?" Pete haughtily inquired.

"You will have to leave immediately if you are not a guest," the butler informed him.

"But if I am a guest?"

"Er wait here sir." The "sir" was added rather doubtfully.

It was too late to make a graceful exit Pete decided with another look at the girl in blue. Better to wait now. Thought clicked on thought as he stood there. Inspiration rewarded his effort. A moment later the butler reappeared with a distinguished looking man in evening dress.

"I am Mr. Bigman's secretary," he said, "there seems to be a misunderstanding—"

"I am a news correspondent for the New York Star Times," Pete stated frankly. "Mr. Bigman invited me this morning to come to his party but because I haven't evening clothes I prefer to remain here in the hall."

The secretary's expression was of utter amazement. "You are a reporter—and Mr. Bigman invited you here?"

Pete nodded. "Yes."

"Pardon me." The secretary excused himself and through the curtains Pete saw him approach Mr. Bigman. They were in earnest conference for a moment and then the aged millionaire smiled. He was still smiling when he faced Pete.

"I don't seem to remember inviting you here young man—but since you are here—"

"Do you remember when you were golfing this morning you asked 'Will you all be over tonight?'" Pete's eyes twinkled. "Well, I thought of course you included me in your invitation—I was standing right there by the others!" he finished reproachfully.

Mr. Bigman's eyes twinkled in return. "Of course you would think so," he nodded agreement. "A good reporter would—but now you must come in and meet my other guests." Gently he propelled the embarrassed Pete into the living room. Courteously introducing him to several nearby guests then rejoining a companion with whom he had been talking. The girl violinist smiled at Pete and he hastened to join her.

Both Reporters

"This being a reporter isn't so sweet sometimes!" Pete pulled at his collar. I didn't expect to—"

"Are you a reporter?" gasped the girl.

"The best on the STAR-TIMES," Pete modestly admitted. "Why?"

"Well, I'm from the PRESS-HERALD." She eyed him resentfully.

"Rivals!" Pete exclaimed dramatically.

"If I'd known that, you'd never have gotten in here and to think you came in with me," wailed the girl.

"Well, I don't look like most reporters," Pete consoled her. "It wasn't your fault you didn't recognize me; I didn't know you either with your violin."

"It was the only way I could think of to get in." She continued to stare dismally at her silver slippers. "And now you've spoiled it all."

"Why? You've got the scoop," Pete reminded her. "Your paper will carry the story first—my sheet's an afternoon edition you know."

"But I was warned to look out for you!"

"O that's nothing," Pete breezily assured her. "So was I!"

She laughed then, a good humored little giggle. "We'll have to be more careful the next time."

"And when will that be?" Pete asked eagerly.

Frisby's Newest Novelty Charms Capital Society

Congressman Frisby has given us consent to reproduce his latest novelty social cards which have taken the national capital by storm. Mr. Frisby is the center of all social groups, where he may be seen passing out the cards right and left. He is very popular with the diplomatic corps, and they are always playing pranks on each other. An ambassador from one country will get down on his hands and knees behind Mr. Frisby, while some of the ladies give the congressman a shove. Frisby then retaliates good naturedly by jerking rugs from beneath these dignitaries, thus upsetting international relations.

Unfair Tax Assessments

Complexity of Assessor's Job Brings Into Question Its Complaints. Both Comment on Local News.

A certain amount of grumbling ought to be expected when taxes are raised, whether the increase is the average or an increase in the assessment of any one piece of property. But the storm of protest that has arisen this year over the higher assessments calls for explanation of a different kind. The indignation is too great to be explained merely as the normal, natural repugnance to paying more money than can be helped.

The sincerity of the 5,000 taxpayers of the Eighth Ward, who are preparing to go into court with the complaint that their property has been unjustly assessed, is not to be questioned. These folks believe they have been discriminated against—that in comparison with other taxpayers an unreasonably high valuation has been placed upon the houses and lots.

*An assertion made by Controller Pinchot in an ad*dress before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce Thursday night is of interest in connection with the dissatisfaction of Pittsburgh taxpayers. Controller Pinchot said Philadelphia assessments are notoriously unequal, with some values without qualification based upon political influence. He charged that the true value of property is ignored by the Board of Revision of Taxes is composed of incompetent politicians.

*Is the Pittsburgh Board of Tax Assessors com*posed of incompetent politicians, wholly without qualification to determine the true value of property? The Sun-Telegraph does not undertake to answer. To judge from expressions at neighborhood mass meetings held in various parts of Pittsburgh lately to discuss the assessment matter, a considerable section of the public does not think even highly of the assessors' ability. The proposed lawsuits will throw some light on the question.

The second fund of $1,000,000 appropriated by Council for the relief of the unemployed has been exhausted, and the city's relief activities are to cease. Unfortunately, the need for relief has not ceased. We trust the welfare associations will be able to carry on the good work that has been done by Mrs. Enoch Kauh, director of public welfare, and the co-operating social service agencies.

Allegheny County has been asked to contribute $300,000 to the special fund of $10,000,000 that the Red Cross is raising for the relief of drought victims. The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies seeks $450,000. And we still have the unemployment situation. Pittsburgh is well able to meet all these demands. Nothing in the way of real sacrifice is being called for—nothing comparable to the demands that were made during the war.

The order signed by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in the United States District Court, under the terms of which the government acquires 16,276 acres of land in Warren County for addition to the Allegheny National Forest, apparently assures the preservation of "Heart's Content," which lies within the tract. "Heart's Content" is a forest of virgin white pines, hundreds of years old and superb in their majesty. It is good news that they are not to fall before the lumberman, but are to stand as a memorial of the primeval forest from which Pennsylvania derived its name.

*The opening of the Automobile Show in Pitts*burgh today is an event of general interest and considerable importance. The motor car plays so essential a part in modern life that it behooves everybody to know something about the different makes and the new improvements. There is no better way to acquire the information than by visiting the show.

A Debt of Honor

Payment of Bonus Now Would Provide Needed Assistance to War Veterans.

Justice, not charity, demands the payment of the veterans' bonus now.

Now is the time the veterans urgently need the assistance which the immediate settlement of this just debt would give them.

And the dictates of common sense reinforce the demands of justice. Because now is the time when the whole country would benefit by the large amount of money which the payment of the veterans' bonus would quickly put in circulation.

We acknowledged the justice of this debt when our representatives in Congress passed the adjusted service bill over a presidential veto nearly seven years ago.

By this legislation we provided adjusted service certificates for all veterans of the great war below the rank of major in the Army and lieutenant commander in the Navy.

These certificates constitute 20-year endowment policies. They vary in amount according to the veterans' ages, length of service, and service overseas or at home. The average amount is $1,012.

Holders of these certificates can make annual loans upon them, either from the Veterans' Bureau or from banks.

How badly the veterans need the assistance which the redemption of these policies now would provide is shown by the fact that most veterans are taking cash for their certificates every year instead of holding them for their final redemption value.

Loans on 2,523,000 policies had been made by the Veterans' Bureau up to November 1 last. How many other loans have been made by banks can only be estimated.

Our head servants at Washington have repeatedly admitted the economic wisdom of large expenditures for public works to reduce unemployment, increase consumption, stabilize production and encourage a general revival of business.

As its contribution the federal government is now engaged upon the greatest program of waterway, harbor, flood control, public building, highway and airway improvement in all our history.

State and municipal governments are supplementing this federal program by building programs of their own—all for the purpose of helping men out of work to get work, helping workers to hold their jobs, helping to provide a market for the products of agriculture, commerce and labor, and helping to revive business.

These public works are needed. Equally needed is the immediate assistance which the payment of the veterans' bonus now would provide for our defenders with the colors in the great war.

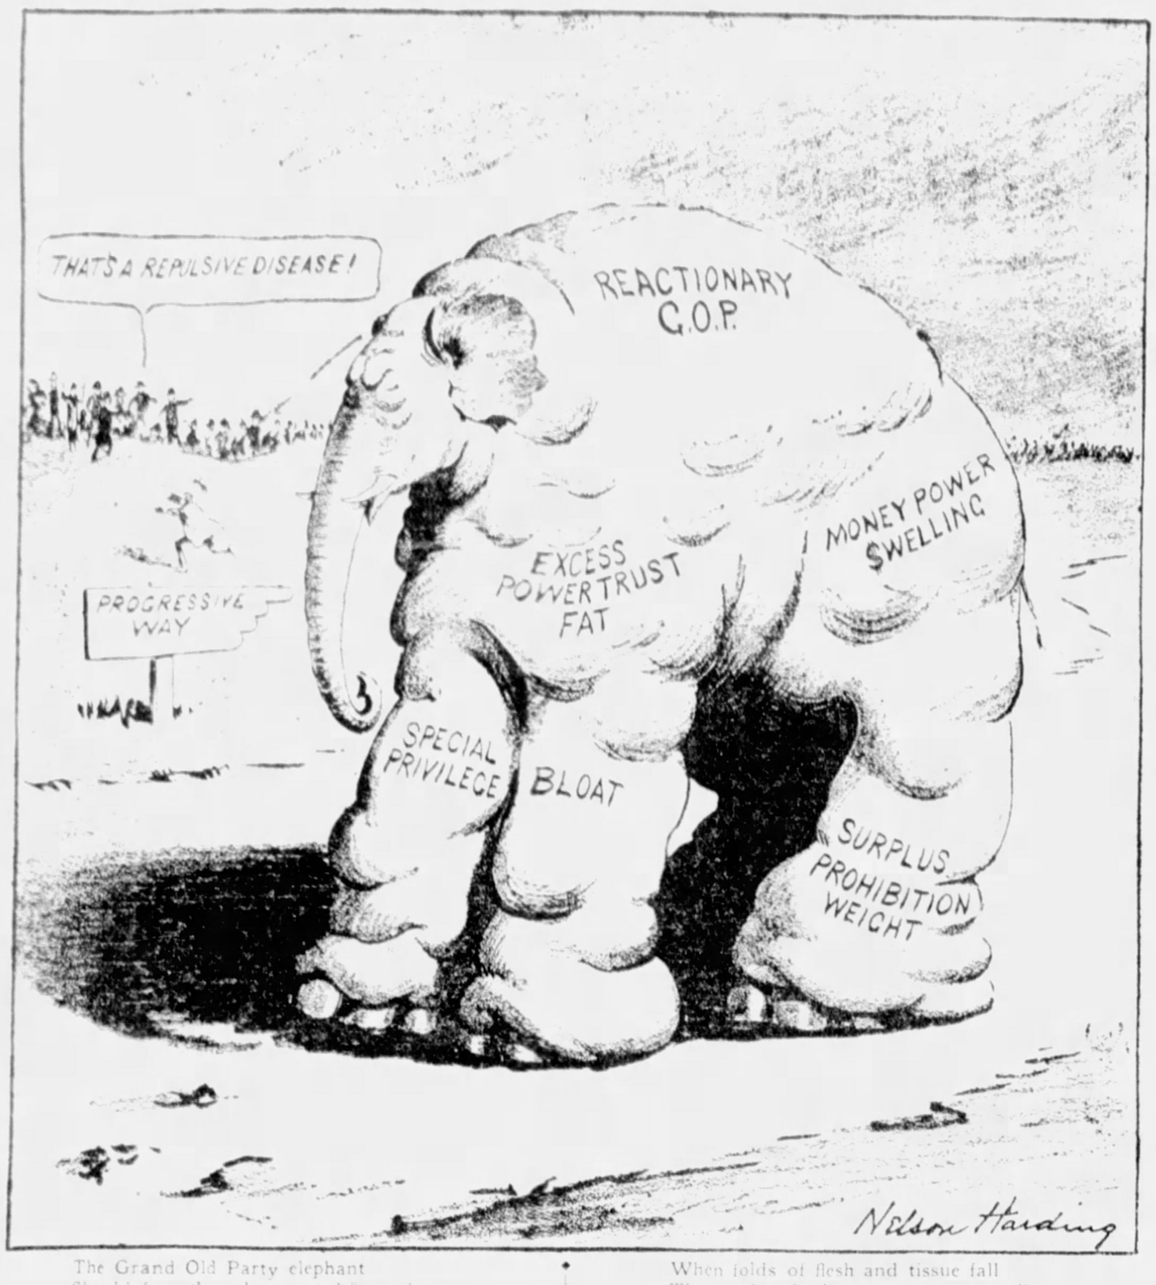
Let us pay this debt of honor and meet the demands of justice.

Let us enable the veterans to put this vast sum of money into circulation NOW and obey the dictates of common sense.

By going quickly to the assistance of the veterans we shall help the entire household of the nation that they offered their all in the great war to defend.

Elephantiasis

By Nelson Harding



The Grand Old Party elephant
Should face the other way, but can't
Because of its excessive fat,
Which keeps the creature standing pat.

When folds of flesh and tissue fall
They make the head seem very small;
An elephant with this disease
Presents a sight that doesn't please.

A Winning Hand, Maybe

But It Costs Money.

THE BOLSHEVIST PAPER IZVESTIA, PUBLISHED IN MOSCOW, HAS A HABIT OF PRINTING BLUNT TRUTHS ABOUT OUTSIDE NATIONS THAT IT CALLS "CAPITALISTIC GOVERNMENTS."

This picture from Izvestia shows the powerful hand held by the French government, four kings, hard to beat. Each card represents a country that stands ready to take part in any war on the side of France, if war should be declared. Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Poland would be with France, if they don't change their minds.

These countries, with territory carved out of defeated nations after the big war, would be useful allies for France, if they should really fight for France when the time came. But meanwhile their friendship is expensive.

They keep up big armies, and need a great deal of money which they must borrow. France feels that their friendship means security and that it is worth while to finance them.

Not so long ago France was lending 30,000,000,000 of francs to Russia. The Russian Czar was supposed to be a friend of France, and he was. But he was overthrown, and the 30,000,000,000 francs, 6,000,000,000 gold dollars, that France lent to Russia will never come back.

There may be similar experiences on a smaller scale, in connection with this wonderful "pat hand."

TOMORROW'S DOCTOR

By Archibald Henderson

The triumph of specialization in all forms of scientific research in recent times has had some remarkable results. It has resulted in the extraordinary influence exerted by the practice of "group medicine." A clinic of specialists is formed. A patient is subjected to a series of separate examinations by each of these various specialists. Ultimately, in the great majority of cases, the seat of the ailment of the malady is located, studied, identified, treated, and it may be, and often is, cured.

The inevitable result of this drive towards universal specialization has been the tendency toward the gradual disappearance of the general practitioner. The good old family doctor we all knew and loved in our youth, with his genial smile, his hopeful air, his uplifting "bedside manner" is gone. Is he never to return? And by his disappearance, what have we lost?

The one great asset of this type of physician was the powerful effect which his all-pervasive optimism had upon the patient. Whether he knew at the outset what ailed his patient or not, he took the indispensable step which "psychiatry" medicine insists on, if it succeed, so far as might be possible with the temperament of the individual patient, in removing anxiety at the outset. The latent powers of endurance of the patient are thus summoned to the rescue. The patient allies himself vigorously with the doctor in a united effort for recovery. The salutary and life-giving energies of the patient are released for his betterment.

Once upon a time, says R. M. Wilson, the priest was the doctor; tomorrow the doctor may well become the priest, in a new sense of the word. "At least, he will see to it that his patient is free from gloom and anxiety, and possesses all the confidence and support which the world can afford him."

The "quack" often achieves remarkable "cures." This is the result, in most cases, of his loudly expressed faith in a cure. The patient morally girds up his loins, and vigorously assists in fighting the battle for health and life. This is the unquestioned strength of the curative force of all systems of mental healing, of which Christian Science is perhaps the most conspicuous. By removing the fear complex, they succeed in enlisting all the vital forces of the patient on their side. And that, do not doubt it, is the side of recovery.

In his little book, "Pygmalion," Wilson significantly says: "The physician of the future will not, as is now universally assumed, be a scientist" of the orthodox type, a man with the technique of laboratories at his fingers' ends, and with the aim in his mind of elucidating the phenomena of life in terms of chemistry or physics. Rather, he will be a humanist, a man with the widest possible knowledge of human nature, and the deepest possible understanding of human motives. He will be a cultured man, ripe in intellectual attainments, but not lacking in emotional sympathy, a lover of the arts as well as a student of the sciences. This is, indeed, no more than a projection into the future of a gracious figure of the past—for the great physicians of other days were all likewise great citizens of humanity. Yet the projection is, I think, justified by reason of the very scepticism it is sure to abuse. I look forward to the time when the practice of medicine will include, within its scope, every influence of known potency over the human spirit, and when the practitioner, like Pygmalion, will look on his work and see, not disease and death, but the glowing lineaments of life."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

If someone told you that your baby was worth half as much to Uncle Sam as a good target bow would you feel? Mighty mad? If you didn't, you wouldn't deserve to have a child. Yet that is exactly how American children rate in the proposed federal budget recently submitted to Congress by President Hoover.

The exact figures are $399,000 for the CHILDREN'S BUREAU as against $750,000 for the NATIONAL BOARD FOR THE PROMOTION OF RIFLE PRACTICE.

Did you ever hear of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice? No, of course you didn't. Neither did anyone else. But at that it registered twice as loud in the White House as the clamor of 45,000,000 American children. And President Hoover likes children. But probably he knows Congress.

Does that mean that our Congressmen and Senators will arise on the floors of their respective houses and make mean remarks about "baby" babies? Don't be silly! NEVER will you hear the Dear Little Children mentioned in our Federal halls save with smiles and kisses and maybe a few well-aimed sobs.

But that doesn't prevent them from killing the Sheppard-Towner law by which aid was given to poor ignorant mothers lacking which aid, America holds the greatest infant mortality record of any civilized country. Nor does that prevent them from blocking child labor legislation. One million American children between the ages of 10 and 16 gainfully employed! Two hundred thousand full-time working certificates issued in 1929, as against 150,000 in 1928. Just statistics? Would you consider it "just statistics" if it were YOUR 10-year-old girl grubbing in a beet field, YOUR 12-year-old boy drudging in a mine?

FOUR BILLION DOLLARS to boost American interests, but of that four billion only $399,000 for American babies. And almost twice as much to promote rifle practice?

I do not know where or how the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice is housed. But I can tell you that, for all the housing it gets, the Children's Bureau might as well roost in a tree. I saw its quarters recently. If there's a thinner flat-trap in America, tell Ripley about it. He syndicates novelties like that.

For 18 years the Children's Bureau has been working in that rat-trap and similar shanties. At present Miss Grace Abbott is at the head of that work. I met her. She looked tired. She looked mad. She looked as if she wanted to sit right down and cry but couldn't, because she had a big washing to do. She has a big washing to do and she's doing it splendidly with both fists, in a shack that's just about fit for a Chinese laundry.

But somewhere, sitting in and on and around $732,000 worth of classy, official furniture, the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice confers on the question of when and where and who is to shoot. I could tell 'em!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Fruitage

When someone comes whose coming fires a light
That never shone before within your eyes;
Ah, then you can be sure the world is right,
Nor has earth strayed too far from Paradise!

When one comes in whose footfall sets your heart
And makes the pulse grow quicker in your wrist,
Full well you know that, though all else depart,
So long as that one stay naught will be missed.

God has been kind in all the gifts He made,
For man on earth—white roses, sunsets, song,
Laughter, and moonlight, kisses and smooth jade,
And patient strength for labors hard and long.
But this is fruitage of His tenderest mood,
This gift of one whose coming makes all good!

Marry-Go-Round

Women, Today and Yesterday

There is no reward for returning a lost, strayed or stolen husband—not even in heaven.

* * *

No wife is suspicious of her husband as long as he lets her select his haberdashery and has to be told when he needs a haircut.

Nothing makes a girl who "understands" a married man so indignant as to discover that he is still running around with his wife on odd evenings.

* * *

A pre-war girl is one who remembers the time when a woman tried to persuade the salesgirl to wrap up her new corset so that nobody would suspect what was in the package and embarrass her to blushes.

* * *

All those old-fashioned men who trembled for fear modern independence would unsex women and rob them of their beauty, should read the income-tax returns of the beauty specialists and cosmetic manufacturers.

* * *

Love's tragedy is not that it sometimes dies, but that, sooner or later, it always goes into a coma on one side or the other.

A modern wife does not force her husband to don a frock coat and sit through a long windy sermon every Sunday morning to save his soul; she merely folds him into a dinette and makes him eat spinach every evening to save his digestion and his blood pressure.

* * *

In the Mauve Decade a party began on lemonade or weak punch and ended on the stroke of midnight—but you got the real flavor of a kiss and your thrills were not synthetic.

Isn't It So?

No man is a bore who talks to you about yourself.

A speeder generally gets his rights, but they are last rites.

Enough is as good as a feast, but the average man wants a surplus.

Friendship must be lubricated with tact. Even our friends will wear out with constant use.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—I am one of those tittupy nit-wits forever straightening up from a low sweeping bow to someone I know but casually, only to see them looking the other way. And then flounder around, furious at myself for being just a big boob again.

Similarly, I have frequently rushed across theater lobbies or other conspicuous public places with hand extended toward someone. But by time I reach them they would be tying their shoe laces or utterly entranced by some ceiling chandelier.

Upon such occasions I know I could walk under a nearby cuspidor wearing a silk hat. At the Ambassadeurs in Paree a summer or so ago I saw a lady who had crossed with us a week previous. Our deck chairs were adjacent and we had exchanged not only conversation but a few books.

Once indeed in a tempestuous sea I gallantly assisted her to the rail and walked discreetly away, ever the little gentleman. It was natural in spotting her at the entracte I should greet her cordially. She eyed me coldly through a lorgnette and turned it on her program.

And there I was approaching with my mitt stuck out. But I turned it off slick. In front of her sat one of those slightly cuppy blond Frenchman with winey cheeks and a suggestion of dulled comprehension. I grabbed his hand and shouted: "Hello Alex, how's the kid?"

I endured so many of these embarrassing moments I have decided to speak to no one first from now on unless I know them intimately. After all, why should I allow a lot of mugs who do not interest me particularly to kick my inferiority complex around?

One of the fancy customs in New York is to receive about 10 introductions to a stranger before he begins to bestow one of those hurried little nods. If you speak familiarly before that you are decidedly downtown, to say nothing of gauche. (How I carry on!)

* * *

Another thing inspiring a blinking bafflement is to run across somebody you used to know who has come upon sudden and recent success. I had my twirl at that 16 years ago. We lived in adjoining hall bedrooms, three flights up in a shabby boarding house in the middlewest. He came on to New York and wrote a successful play. I arrived when he was quite the rage and secretly expected to bask a little in reflected glory. But did I know New York!

* * *

After a number of futile telephone calls to his apartment, to which an oddly familiar voice responded that "Mr. Blank was working where there was no telephone"—and would I leave a message?—I gave up the quest. But one night I saw him in the old Knickerbocker lobby. (I used to hang around in the hope of seeing Caruso.) He, resplendent in evening clothes, was with two ladies evidently awaiting someone. But that didn't matter. I stepped into it up to my neck. Hadn't we swiped each other's cigarets, cut our own hair and bilked the same bartenders together? Don't be ridic!

* * *

So I whanged him on the back, bestowed one of those little midwest bear hugs and waited for him to shout a joyous surprise. Instead he gave a farthest north look. "It's O. O. McIntyre," I beamed. "You know—Sniggle-fritz!" Just about then the bottom fell out of the thermometer. "O, haaass!" he drawled. "Certainly glad to see you. Jolly little bunch we had out there." And then, visibly nervous, he turned apologetically to the ladies with: "One of the western reporters I used to know—meet Mr. McGuire!" It was my first experience in expert high-hatting, and I don't know yet how I walked across the lobby to the revolving door without a balancing pole or a Japanese umbrella. I'm still a little dizzy.

* * *

Nearly 20 years of this town and all yokel geniality is squeezed out. One becomes querulously exigent of inborn sensitivity. (I write that swell standing as well as sitting!) The only two persons I met after coming here to whom I can unbend enough to yell: "Hello, you big stiff!" are Paul Whiteman and oddly enough William Thaw, a Social Registerite, and, I presume, a millionaire—he's from Pittsburgh anyway. For the rest I have the high-nosed aloofness of the human icicle. From my manner they'd never know I snapped at pig jowls and skipped puddles. I'm one of God's Frozen People.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you so interested in yourself and your immediate family that you have no time for sympathy for those outside who are carrying heavy burdens?

You think you are weighted with enough of your own.

You would not have to look far to find those whose troubles are so much more serious than yours.

The world needs more sympathy.

You and others of your kind who become hardened to the afflictions of mankind are responsible for much sorrow which might be prevented.

If you have never aided, by word or deed, those who have sorrow, you missed a great deal from your life.

There is always a result reflected from every good and helpful act. This is rich in its reward.

The present is a good time to break the crust of reserve and selfishness that has kept you from following the generous impulses you have from time to time.

Thousands of men, women and children need the sort of kindness you could give so easily, and it might be a comfort to you as well as those in trouble.
